EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In December 2017 the Australian Government ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT). In announcing Australia's intention to ratify OPCAT, the former Minister for Foreign Affairs described ratification as a significant human rights achievement for the government.¹

OPCAT is an international treaty designed to strengthen protections for people in situations where they are deprived of their liberty and potentially vulnerable to mistreatment or abuse. The key obligations arising from ratification include establishing a system of regular preventive visits by independent bodies, known as National Preventive Mechanisms (NPMs), and accepting visits from the United Nations Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (SPT).

OPCAT does not create new rights for people who are detained, but it seeks to reduce the likelihood of mistreatment. It makes clear that the rights of people deprived of their liberty should be respected and upheld. This is important, both as a matter of principle and of good public policy. It recognises that almost all people deprived of their liberty will, at some stage, be released and require successful reintegration into the community. The mechanisms to be established in accordance with OPCAT are designed to ensure that conditions and treatment within places of detention are respectful, safe and humane. This is one lever to promote rehabilitation and reduce the rate of recidivism.

At the time of ratification, the Australian Government made a declaration under Article 24 (Part IV) of OPCAT postponing the implementation of its obligations to establish its NPM for three years.² The mandate allowing for in-country visits by the SPT has not been delayed and could take place at any time. In fact, the United Nations Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture (SPT) has announced it intends to visit Australia in the coming months, and has a particular interest in the establishment of its NPM.

In Australia's federated system there is the potential for both gaps and areas of overlap in arrangements that exist across jurisdictions. This is neither unexpected nor insurmountable. The steps towards successful implementation are not unknown, nor are they impossible to achieve. We can look to effective monitoring regimes in comparable international jurisdictions and consider internationally accepted guidance material. We can also learn from domestic arrangements where inspection bodies are close to being ready to be able to conduct OPCAT inspections. It is likely that some changes to practices or structures will be required for most, if not all, existing bodies — including the Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman — in the journey towards OPCAT implementation.

The Australian Government announced the Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman as the NPM for Commonwealth places of detention, with effect from 1 July 2018. It also announced the Office as the NPM Coordinator. In our role as the NPM Coordinator we do not have authority over other inspectorates and do not intend to engage in secondary inspections. The Office's intention is that its coordination role will be undertaken in a collaborative and cooperative manner, with a focus on research, sharing expertise and developing communities of practice focused on areas of vulnerability or concern.

The purpose of this report is to provide a comprehensive and contemporary overview of Australia's readiness to implement OPCAT. The work of 55 existing Commonwealth, state and territory inspection and oversight bodies was examined as part of our baseline assessment of OPCAT readiness.

In undertaking this review of existing oversight bodies we focused on:

- how they operate.
- how they inspect or monitor.
- which places they can access.
- inspection methodologies and principles.

We also mapped the types and numbers of places of detention within Australia, at least those that fit within the concept of 'primary places of detention'.

This report complements the work being done by the Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC), led by Human Rights Commissioner Edward Santow. While the AHRC's work has focused on engagement with civil society, this report is based on engagement with and self-assessment by the entities that currently do have, or may have, a role in oversight and inspection of places of detention. These complementary roles for the AHRC and the Office demonstrate how agencies and bodies can leverage each other's existing expertise and work together to ensure that all perspectives are considered in OPCAT implementation.

Part 1 of this report describes OPCAT and also the Office's dual role as the NPM Coordinator and the NPM inspector of Commonwealth places of detention. It outlines the Australian Government's decision to focus OPCAT implementation on places described as 'primary places of detention'.

Part 1 also considers how OPCAT has been adopted internationally with an emphasis on the approaches taken in other Commonwealth countries, specifically the United Kingdom and New Zealand. This part uses the experience of those countries to reflect on what could be best practice for OPCAT implementation in Australia. It acknowledges the specific challenges for Australia in terms of its geographical size and the distances between places of detention and the bodies responsible for their oversight.

Part 2 of this report summarises Australia's readiness for OPCAT implementation by jurisdiction, and discusses areas of overlap or gaps in current arrangements. The report provides a jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction assessment of OPCAT readiness, including with respect to the inspection of Commonwealth places of detention.

This part of the report reviews what international good practice suggests should be embodied by NPMs to ensure a preventive focus of:

- independence.
- composition and a multi-disciplinary approach.
- unfettered access to places, information and persons in detention.
- public reporting and ability to make recommendations.
- privileges, immunities and protections from reprisals.

The purpose of this report is not to criticise any current body or jurisdiction. Rather, the material serves as a baseline against which to assess progress over time, and to highlight particular areas where it is suggested that improvements in capability will need to be made to achieve effective OPCAT implementation. The appendices provide snapshot summaries of the self-assessments by existing bodies and the extent to which they already meet the requirements set out in OPCAT. Snapshots in this report capture the number and type of facilities able to be accessed by different bodies within each jurisdiction.

Finally, Part 3 of the report highlights further areas for consideration, such as resourcing, scope, the important role of civil society and legislative or structural amendments that may be required. This part of the report also considers potential future activities of the NPM Coordinator and how those activities can enhance the work of the NPMs across the Commonwealth, states and territories.

Beyond the mid-way point of the three year implementation period, it is important to move demonstrably forward. There is a level of urgency associated with the successful implementation of OPCAT. Not only have we as a nation signed up to OPCAT, but recent high-profile examples of poor practices in places of detention nationally have shown that a systematic, well-resourced and preventive inspection regime is required. Implementing OPCAT should not merely involve re-badging existing bodies, without also having regard to the resourcing, legislative and operational implications.

However, the next critical step is for jurisdictions to nominate NPMs and ensure they are placed on an appropriate footing to undertake the functions required under OPCAT. The publication of this report coincides with Western Australia's recent nomination of its NPMs. The Western Australian Ombudsman and the Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services have been nominated as Western Australia's NPMs for mental health and other secure facilities, and justice-related facilities (including police lock-ups), respectively.

Victoria has also advised it is working towards nominating its NPM, including considering the suitability of new bodies or the adaptation of existing bodies with a new legislative mandate to give effect to its OPCAT obligations. South Australia has also advised it is close to reaching agreement on a proposed model for implementing its obligations under OPCAT to establish a NPM. We understand that, following the publication of this report and the AHRC's report, the ACT intends to engage with its stakeholders on a final NPM model. Tasmania has advised that an inter-agency working group is continuing to meet in that jurisdiction to resolve its NPM nomination.

Implementation of OPCAT will require respectful and collaborative engagement. We hope this report will contribute positively to those discussions.

GLOSSARY

APT	The Association for the Prevention of Torture is an independent non-governmental organisation based in Geneva, working globally since 1977 to prevent torture and other forms of ill treatment. It advocates for the ratification of OPCAT and the adoption of legal and policy frameworks to ensure the effective prevention of abuse.
CAT	The Committee Against Torture, which monitors implementation of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment by its State Parties.
Cruel or inhuman treatment or punishment	In accordance with Article 16 of the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment: ‘Each State Party shall undertake to prevent in any territory under its jurisdiction other acts of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment which do not amount to torture as defined in Article 1, when such acts are committed by or at the instigation of or with the consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity.’
Deprivation of liberty	As defined in Article 4(2) of OPCAT: ‘...any form of detention or imprisonment or the placement of a person in a public or private custodial setting which that person is not permitted to leave at will by order of any judicial, administrative or other authority.’
DFCE	Defence Force Corrective Establishment — the tri-service military correctional facility for service personnel under arrest, or service personnel serving a sentence of imprisonment for more than 14 days.
NPM	National Preventive Mechanism. Article 3 of OPCAT states: ‘Each State Party shall set up, designate or maintain at the domestic level one or several visiting bodies for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (hereinafter referred to as the national preventive mechanism).’
NPM Network	National Preventive Mechanism Network — the network of NPM bodies likely to be established to implement Australia’s obligations under OPCAT.
OPCAT	The Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations in December 2002 and entered into force in June 2006. OPCAT was ratified by the Australian Government on 21 December 2017 and entered into force on 20 January 2018.
SPT	The United Nations Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which comprises of 25 independent international experts. SPT undertake visits to State Parties that have ratified OPCAT and visit any place where persons may be deprived of their liberty, and also advise State Parties on the establishment of NPMs. ³
The Office	The Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman.

Places of detention	As defined in Article 4(1) of OPCAT: 'Any place under [the State Party's] jurisdiction and control where persons are or may be deprived of their liberty, either by virtue of an order given by a public authority or at its instigation or with its consent or acquiescence (hereinafter referred to as places of detention).'
Primary places of detention	The Commonwealth has suggested that, in the first instance, arrangements be put in place to ensure OPCAT compliance at the following places of detention: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • adult prisons • juvenile detention facilities (excluding residential secure facilities) • police lock-up or police station cells (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs) • closed facilities or units where people may be involuntarily detained by law for mental health assessment or treatment (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs such as a locked ward at a residential institution⁴) • closed forensic disability facilities or units where people may be involuntarily detained by law for care (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs), such as a Disability Forensic Assessment and Treatment Service⁵ • immigration detention centres • military detention facilities.
Torture	In accordance with Article 1 of the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment: '...any act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted on a person for such purposes as obtaining from him or a third person information or a confession, punishing him for an act he or a third person has committed or is suspected of having committed, or intimidating or coercing him or a third person, or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind, when such pain or suffering is inflicted by or at the instigation of or with the consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity. It does not include pain or suffering arising only from, inherent in or incidental to lawful sanctions.'
UNCAT	The United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

PART 1: OPCAT, THE NPM AND CONSIDERATION OF INTERNATIONAL BEST PRACTICE

The Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT)

1.1. OPCAT was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in December 2002 and entered into force on 22 June 2006. As of 25 June 2019 there are 90 State Parties and 13 Signatories to the treaty, with 71 State Parties having designated their NPM.⁶ The full text of OPCAT is at Appendix 1.

1.2. The Australian Government ratified OPCAT on 21 December 2017. Upon ratification, Australia made a declaration under Article 24 of OPCAT to postpone NPM obligations for three years.

1.3. The Australian Government ratified the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment (UNCAT) in 1989. OPCAT builds upon the protections in UNCAT by requiring the establishment of a system of independent monitoring for places of detention through domestic bodies known as NPMs.

1.4. Independent monitoring includes consideration of conditions, practices and treatment that could amount to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment. Specific examples of ill-treatment include conditions of detention such as prolonged solitary confinement, lack of access to toilet facilities and denial of privacy.⁷ Other examples include the use of excessive force such as using restraints when they are not required, or degrading punishment that has a degree of humiliation involved.⁸ International guidance also references holding a detained or imprisoned person in conditions which deprive them temporarily or permanently of the use of any of their natural senses such as sight or hearing, or awareness of place and the passing of time.⁹

United Nations Subcommittee on the Prevention of Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (SPT)

1.5. In addition to domestic NPMs, OPCAT establishes a mechanism to facilitate international expert visits to places of detention as a further safeguard of protections for people in places of detention. These visits take place under the mandate of the SPT.

1.6. The SPT consists of 25 independent and impartial experts who have a threefold mandate to:

- visit places of detention.
- advise and assist respective governments and NPMs regarding NPM establishment and function.

- co-operate with other international, regional and national like-minded organisations.

1.7. OPCAT gives a wide mandate to the SPT and requires that the SPT be given access to all places of detention, and unrestricted access to information about the number of people in detention and their conditions of treatment. The SPT is required to have the opportunity to interview people of its choosing. The SPT is able to make recommendations and report to authorities on its findings. Authorities and facilities subject to a visit from the SPT are not required to publish the SPT reports or their responses to recommendations made, but are encouraged to do so.

National Preventive Mechanism Coordinator (NPM Coordinator)

1.8. At the time the Australian Government announced its intention to ratify OPCAT, it also announced the Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman as both the NPM for Commonwealth places of detention and the NPM Coordinator for Australia.¹⁰

1.9. It is intended that a network of NPM bodies from each jurisdiction will be facilitated by the NPM Coordinator. The states and territories can set up, designate or maintain one or multiple entities as an NPM and to form part of the NPM network.

1.10. It is envisaged that the NPM Coordinator will have a policy and research role to promote improvements and share experiences between bodies in strengthening oversight in places of detention. This is likely to also include developing ways to respond to issues that are common across places of detention and jurisdictions.

1.11. The Australian Government made regulations that came into effect on 10 April 2019, which establish the functions of the Office in relation to both the NPM coordination function and the NPM for Commonwealth places of detention.

1.12. The function of the NPM Coordinator¹¹ includes the ability to:

- consult on and undertake research on the development of standards and principles.
- collect information on oversight arrangements.
- propose options and develop resources to facilitate improvements in oversight arrangements, including identifying gaps and levels of duplication.
- communicate with the SPT on behalf of the NPM network.
- convene meetings and facilitate collaboration between all levels of government and the NPM network.
- publicly report on findings.
- make recommendations.

1.13. The NPM Coordinator cannot compel or direct a person or body that is part of the NPM network, nor do the regulations provide for the NPM Coordinator to conduct secondary inspections of places of detention that fall within the remit of another NPM.

1.14. Our function as the NPM Coordinator took effect from 1 July 2018. Until recently no other jurisdiction had nominated an NPM. In the absence of other NPMs being nominated we focused on outreach and research.

¹¹ Ombudsman Amendment (National Preventive Mechanism) Regulations 2019 (Cth).

1.15. In the course of our preliminary discussions with a range of stakeholders, it became apparent that the complex and diverse range of oversight arrangements within jurisdictions and across the country made it difficult to assess how OPCAT-ready Australia is at this point in time.

1.16. To assist in furthering this discussion we have compiled this baseline assessment of the current state of OPCAT readiness in Australia by mapping the inspection and oversight regimes already operating across places of detention. We instigated outreach with bodies and office holders in each jurisdiction that may have a role in the future NPM network. In the 2018—19 financial year, senior members of the Office met with 62 bodies which have an inspection or oversight function, or have a wider interest in the progress of OPCAT implementation in Australia. We have worked collaboratively with the AHRC and were regular participants at the civil society consultation roundtables hosted by the AHRC.

National Preventive Mechanism for Commonwealth places of detention

1.17. In addition to our function as the NPM Coordinator, this Office has been designated as the NPM for Commonwealth places of detention. The Commonwealth NPM functions¹² include the following:

- undertaking regular inspections of places of detention under the control of the Commonwealth.
- giving information to the SPT to facilitate the inspection of places of detention by the SPT
- incidental functions.

1.18. Since 2004—05 this Office has visited immigration detention facilities in our role as the Immigration Ombudsman.¹³ As the NPM responsible for Commonwealth places of detention, we will continue to oversee immigration detention facilities including Immigration Transit Accommodation and Alternative Places of Detention in Australia and the external territories, such as Christmas Island (as required).

1.19. Our jurisdiction as the NPM for Commonwealth places of detention has been extended to include Australian Federal Police (AFP) cells and Australian Defence Force (ADF) military detention facilities. ADF facilities include the Defence Force Correctional Establishment (DFCE), area and unit detention facilities and any other places of internment over which the ADF exercise command and control. The AFP cells include the Canberra city watch house, and police cells on Christmas and Cocos (Keeling) Islands, Norfolk Island and the Jervis Bay Territory.

Primary places of detention

1.20. OPCAT adopts an expansive definition of places in which people are deprived of their liberty.¹⁴ In ratifying OPCAT the Australian Government indicated that the initial focus for NPMs would be narrower, and focus on primary places of detention.¹⁵ The definition of primary places of detention suggested by the Commonwealth includes:

- adult prisons.
- juvenile detention facilities (excluding residential secure facilities).
- police lock-up or police station cells (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs).
- closed facilities or units where people may be involuntarily detained by law for mental health assessment or treatment (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs).

- closed forensic disability facilities or units where people may be involuntarily detained by law for care (where people are held for equal to, or greater than, 24hrs).
- immigration detention centres.
- military detention facilities.

1.21. For the purposes of this report, we have considered oversight and inspectorate bodies in the context of primary places of detention. We have not included other places where people can be detained, such as some aged care facilities.

1.22. During our outreach, a significant number of stakeholders expressed concern about the proposition that oversight and inspection will be limited to primary places of detention. Concern was most acute in relation to the detention of young people, wherever that detention may take place.

1.23. International experience indicates that implementation of OPCAT occurs over time. Countries tend to gradually expand the scope of inspections of places where people are deprived of their liberty. For example, the mandate of the New Zealand Ombudsman was recently extended to include privately run aged care facilities and court cells.¹⁶ Given that OPCAT is not restricted to primary places of detention it will be necessary over time to consider all places where people are deprived of their liberty in Australia.

Consideration of international best practice

1.24. The three year postponement of NPM obligations provides the opportunity to identify and consider best practice from relevant international NPMs, and implement pragmatic options that suit Australian conditions. Our Office has particularly focused on the United Kingdom (UK) and New Zealand.

United Kingdom

1.25. There are 21 existing statutory bodies¹⁷ that make up the UK NPM with Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons (HMIP) providing support to an independent coordinating chair. These bodies inspect along functional or jurisdictional lines. HMIP inspects adult prisons, young offender institutions, and immigration removal centres. It works with other inspectorates such as Ofsted, which is responsible for inspecting services providing education, skills and children's services, and also the Dental Practice Board and the Royal Pharmaceutical Society.

1.26. The UK NPM bodies also use each other's resources and in many cases facilitate joint inspections of places of detention. For example, the Care Inspectorate (CI) accompanied Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons for Scotland (HMIPS) on four prison inspections in 2017–18. The CI also contributed to the development of methodology for joint inspections focusing on the detention of children and young people, with regard to their experiences and outcomes.¹⁸

New Zealand

1.27. In New Zealand there are four NPMs, coordinated by the New Zealand Human Rights Commission.¹⁹ The coordinating body is responsible for reporting, coordinating systemic issues, and liaising with the SPT. Each NPM has specific thematic mandates to cover different types of places of detention. These include prisons, immigration detention facilities, health and disability places of detention, care and protection residences and youth residences, police and court cells, and New Zealand Defence Force penal establishments.

Legislative mandate for NPM bodies

1.28. New Zealand's Crimes of Torture Act 1989 (COTA) establishes the legislative framework that supports the operation of the NPM function in New Zealand. COTA provides for the establishment of NPMs, permits their access to places of detention, their functions including the examination of conditions and treatment of detainees, the ability to make recommendations, and the preparation and provision of an annual report. COTA provides that NPMs have protections, privileges and immunities, provided they have these under existing Acts.²⁰ For example, the New Zealand Ombudsman has legislated immunities and privileges against disclosure.²¹ The legislation allows for visits by the SPT including access to all places of, and people in, detention.

1.29. In the UK, each NPM operates under its own statutory provisions. With the exception of two Scottish bodies that were designated after OPCAT ratification, the balance of the UK NPM bodies does not have specific provisions that detail their responsibilities under OPCAT. Most of the bodies are designated by ministerial statement as NPMs. The absence of overarching legislation led to criticisms by the SPT about a lack of guaranteed independence, lack of protections from interference, lack of accountability and the undermining of the UK NPM's legitimacy and importance.²² For example, the UK HMIP has legislative powers under various statutes to inspect prisons, young offender institutions, immigration detention facilities, escorts, and court custody. However, its ability to inspect military detention facilities is by invitation only.²³

1.30. The UK's Ministry of Justice advised the Chair of the UK NPM in 2017 that it considers that the NPM complies with the international law requirements of OPCAT.²⁴ In its most recent annual report, the UK NPM noted that meetings with the Ministry of Justice 'resulted in a commitment from the Ministry of Justice to develop a protocol between the NPM and the Ministry of Justice, setting out guarantees of independence for the NPM and its powers under OPCAT. The NPM has made it clear that legislation would be the preferable outcome.'²⁵

1.31. The Australian Government has, at this time, opted not to enact primary legislation at the national level to implement OPCAT, though changes have been made to the Ombudsman Regulations 2017 to give effect to the roles of NPM Coordinator and NPM for Commonwealth places of detention. Some jurisdictions have enacted legislation following OPCAT ratification. For example, the Australian Capital Territory²⁶ and the Northern Territory²⁷ have enacted legislation to enable visits by the SPT. Legislation establishing the Office of the Inspector of Correctional Services (ACT) was also enacted with the aim of being consistent with Australia's obligations under OPCAT.²⁸

Use of surveys

1.32. Surveys of people who are detained are a common feature among many OPCAT inspection regimes. A well-constructed and accessible survey can assist in better understanding the perspectives that those within places of detention have regarding their treatment and conditions. Surveys can also be used to assess the views of staff and contractors about the operation and management of places of detention, in order to provide oversight and inspection teams with a holistic view of a facility.

1.33. The use and analysis of surveys can track trends over time in detainee and staff experience of places of detention, highlight systemic issues, and provide opportunities to target service delivery.

1.34. For those bodies that intend on inspecting facilities, the development and use of surveys can be a useful tool as part of an inspection process into the treatment and conditions of detention. For surveys to be effective and complement other methods of obtaining information about detention conditions, it is important to obtain a representative sample of the detainee and staff population with a meaningful response rate. Surveys should be accessible, they should be able to be completed confidentially without fear of reprisals, and translated into the user's first language.

1.35. UK HMIP surveys prisoners and detainees as part of their assessment of conditions and treatment for those in prisons, young offender institutions, military detention, and immigration detention facilities. Other evidence considered as part of its inspection processes, includes:

- Observations.
- verbal discussions with prisoners, detainees, staff and relevant third parties.
- documentation held by the detaining institution.

1.36. Observation, discussions and the review of documentation are already common features of existing inspecting and oversight bodies in Australia. A number of jurisdictions with a custodial inspectorate (Western Australia, New South Wales, Tasmania and the Australian Capital Territory) also use detainee surveys as part of their inspection processes. The Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman is in the process of trialling surveys for use in OPCAT style inspections. The Victorian Ombudsman used surveys to canvas the views of both staff and prisoners²⁹ during its 2017 OPCAT-style inspection into a women's prison.

Multi-disciplinary teams

1.37. The use of multi-disciplinary teams is a feature of many OPCAT inspection regimes and brings with it the ability to assess detention from a variety of perspectives. The New Zealand Ombudsman uses multi-disciplinary teams and engages external professionals to supplement the core inspection team's expertise. External experts are authorised to examine detainees' treatment and conditions, and to exercise the Ombudsman's powers when undertaking that activity on their behalf. In the context of mental health facilities, the New Zealand Ombudsman includes 'experts by experience' (those with lived experience of detention) to help give alternative perspectives on detainee conditions within mental health facilities, and to engage with people who are detained.

1.38. The UK HMIP has six inspection teams which focus on their particular specialisation in places of detention. The teams consist of healthcare and drugs inspectors, a head of thematic inspections, researchers, and editorial and administrative staff. HMIP works jointly with other inspectorates specialising in education and skills, dentistry and pharmacy to ensure expert knowledge is used and to avoid multiple inspection visits.³⁰

1.39. The Victorian Ombudsman engaged a multi-disciplinary team in its 2019 OPCAT-style thematic inspection considering solitary confinement in juvenile detention. It also established a multi-agency advisory group of commissioners and civil society organisations to give assistance and expertise to its inspection team.³¹ In its 2017 OPCAT-style inspection into a women's prison, the Victorian Ombudsman's inspection team included a contracted clinical psychologist and the New Zealand Ombudsman's OPCAT Chief Inspector. The internal team included officers with backgrounds in nursing, law, criminal justice and human rights.³²

1.40. The ACT Inspector of Correctional Services will bring together experts from the Australian Capital Territory, Victoria, New South Wales and Western Australia in its inaugural Healthy Prison Review of the ACT's adult prison. The team consists of a forensic psychologist (who is also a barrister), prison and custodial services managers, custodial services inspectors, prison health and prison industry experts, and a research officer.³³

1.41. The Office's existing inspection team includes staff with expertise in the management and investigation of immigration and military detention facilities. External expertise in medical care (particularly mental health) and policing will be drawn upon as the Office moves toward OPCAT-style inspections of Commonwealth places of detention.

Shared experience

1.42. The development of an NPM network provides opportunities for NPMs to work collaboratively, share best practice and leverage expertise from other jurisdictions within Australia and internationally.

1.43. The UK NPM Coordinator has facilitated working groups and subcommittees from the wider UK NPM, to draw upon expertise and insights in order to develop good practice along geographic or thematic lines. These subgroups include a focus on children and police custody.

1.44. In 2016 the New Zealand NPM Coordinator commissioned an independent review by an international academic expert on the use of restraints and seclusion practices in facilities monitored by NPMs. The report considered examples of good practice and areas requiring improvement to inform future NPM activities.³⁴

1.45. Across Australia and New Zealand, a range of formal and informal forums to exchange information and best practice already exist. For example, the Custodial Inspectors in Western Australia, New South Wales, Queensland and Tasmania have regular telephone forums to share their wisdom, experiences and challenges.³⁵ This has been of benefit in informing the work of the newer inspectorates. Similarly, Children and Young People Commissioners and Guardians across Australia and New Zealand hold biannual meetings and publish communiques to highlight issues that cut across jurisdictions. In the past, these issues have included the over-representation of Indigenous youth in detention, young people detained for prolonged periods in police watch-houses and police cells, and the view that specialist expertise should be incorporated when inspecting juvenile facilities under OPCAT.³⁶ Representatives responsible for administering Community Visitor Programs in each jurisdiction around Australia also share information about commonalities, such as monitoring conditions for those receiving mental health treatment in closed facilities.

1.46. In our role as NPM Coordinator we intend to facilitate the sharing of expertise and institutional practices in collaboration with other NPMs. This may include:

- organising annual workshops along thematic lines.
- drawing from the lessons of relevant international bodies who are further along their OPCAT journeys.
- encouraging and coordinating the use of working groups and subcommittees within the NPM network.

Announced or unannounced visits

1.47. OPCAT itself does not specify that visits to places of detention should be unannounced. However, the SPT guidance for NPMs states that NPMs should have the right to carry out unannounced visits to all places where people are deprived of their liberty.³⁷

1.48. Announced visits by NPMs can benefit both the inspection mechanism and the facilities being inspected. For example, if an inspecting body seeks to view large quantities of records before or during an inspection, sufficient notice is required for the information to be gathered. Before conducting an announced inspection, the UK HMIP will hold a pre-inspection visit to plan the inspection, request preliminary information, and conduct a confidential survey of a sample of the prison population.³⁸

1.49. Receiving information in a timely manner is an efficient use of a limited inspectorate resource. Similarly, prior notice of a visit may ensure that the inspection team is able to inspect a full range of activities, such as transfer, escort and removal. From a logistical and resourcing perspective it may not be practical to undertake unannounced visits in remote locations, or of facilities that are only used on an ad hoc basis.

1.50. The view of the SPT is that visits should primarily be unannounced and occur at various times of day and night, to verify the true circumstances of conditions of detention.³⁹ The Association for the Prevention of Torture (APT) guidance is that regular visits conducted without prior notice act as a deterrent to torture and ill-treatment, due to the increased likelihood of such conduct being detected.⁴⁰

1.51. The UK HMIP conducts a mix of announced and unannounced visits. Follow-up visits are unannounced and undertaken to assess the progress of implementation of earlier recommendations. No more than 30 minutes' notice is given to facilities ahead of unannounced visits. Unannounced inspections can occur if it is an operational necessity, or if it may help the facility to address concerns and make improvements.⁴¹ Announced prison inspections occur every five years, or more frequently for higher-risk facilities. Announced young offender institution inspections occur every three years. Police inspections are carried out every five to six years. Immigration removal centres are inspected once every three years, non-residential short-term immigration holding facilities are inspected on a six year cycle, and residential short-term immigration holding facilities are inspected on a four year cycle.⁴²

1.52. In 2017–18, 87 per cent of NPM visits to places of detention conducted by the New Zealand Ombudsman were unannounced. In their annual report, the New Zealand Ombudsman noted that the internationally accepted standard is for at least one third of inspections to be unannounced. The report also said that increasing the proportion of unannounced visits enables the Ombudsman to gain a good perspective of day-to-day practices within the visited facilities.⁴³

1.53. The Western Australian Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services uses a mix of announced and unannounced visits. Formal visits are usually announced, with three to four months' notice given to a facility. Ahead of an inspection the Office conducts staff and detainee surveys, analyses data, and records and holds meetings with senior staff and external service providers. In addition to announced inspections, the Office also regularly conducts unannounced or short notice liaison or monitoring visits.⁴⁴ Unannounced visits may occur if there has been a critical event, or when the Inspector receives information suggesting that prison performance has deteriorated, causing significant compromise to prison conditions and the treatment of prisoners.

1.54. The Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman has the power to conduct unannounced visits. However, the Office generally conducts announced visits to immigration detention facilities, with a minimum of six weeks' notice provided to facilities. Unannounced visits are being considered in the context of our OPCAT role for immigration, AFP and military detention facilities.

Thematic focus

1.55. A number of international NPMs and domestic inspection and oversight bodies use thematic inspections, in which a particular aspect or feature of detention is examined in a range of settings. Thematic reports are generally published and can cover several places of detention, provide in-depth analysis of structural causes and address priority problems.⁴⁵ The APT publishes all NPM annual reports and advises when thematic reports have been published. In 2016 the Norwegian NPM published its first thematic report on female inmates in different levels of prisons over a two year period.⁴⁶ In the UK, NPM members publish thematic reports on an individual basis. The UK HMIP has published thematic reports since 2012, on topics such as daily life in prisons (with focuses on food and living conditions), resettlement services for short-term prisoners, and the operation of incentives and behaviour management systems.

1.56. Thematic focuses for inspections may include topics such as:

- the use of restrictive practices and solitary confinement.⁴⁷
- the treatment of people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.
- the treatment of people with disability.
- the treatment of people who identify as LGBTIQ+.

1.57. The use of a thematic focus that cuts across different places of detention can clarify issues, identify commonalities across different places of detention and effectively concentrate the limited resources of inspectorates. For example, the New Zealand NPM published a thematic report considering seclusion and restraint practices across a number of different types of detention facilities.⁴⁸ The report identified that seclusions and restraints were not always used as an option of last resort, that there was a small yet significant number of cases of prolonged use of restraints and there were systemic gaps, especially in relation to caring for those with mental health conditions. The report provided a catalyst for further discussions with a focus on improving the situation.

1.58. In 2015 the UK NPM members explored elements of the detention system that traditionally fell outside of their individual scope and monitoring methodologies, such as pathways between mental health settings, police custody and prisons. This thematic focus helped in its preventive approach to identify risk factors in different settings.⁴⁹

1.59. In 2019 the Victorian Ombudsman undertook a thematic examination of the use of solitary confinement and young people, noting: “a thematic inspection across multiple facilities presents a unique opportunity to examine practices across different closed environments, allowing the investigation to identify both examples of good practice and areas for improvement.”⁵⁰

1.60. Within a three year cycle, the Custodial Inspector Tasmania undertakes themed inspections of custodial settings, focusing on particular inspection standards such as rehabilitation and reintegration across women’s prisons, minimum security facilities and youth detention centres.⁵¹

PART 2: THE OPCAT FRAMEWORK AND BASELINE MAPPING OF EXISTING MONITORING ARRANGEMENTS

The OPCAT framework

2.1. The OPCAT Articles relevant to NPM functions include:

- a preventive visiting mandate.
- independence—financial and functional, including no perceived conflicts of interest.
- composition—gender-balanced and representative.
- unrestricted access to places of detention.
- unfettered access to information.
- unrestricted access to persons, including staff.
- the ability to make public reports and recommendations.
- privileges, immunities and protections from reprisals.
- the ability to communicate with the SPT.

Preventive visiting mandate

2.2. The APT comprehensive NPM checklist⁵² is a tool designed to assist in evaluating bodies against OPCAT requirements. One of the key aspects the APT considers is the extent to which an NPM is specifically mandated by law to conduct preventive visits, on a regular basis and without prior notice.

2.3. The preventive visiting mandate is the defining difference between what many inspection and oversight bodies do now and what will take place under OPCAT. The focus under OPCAT is the prevention of harm rather than the ability to respond when harm occurs. OPCAT is concerned with examining the systems and lived experiences of people who are deprived of their liberty.

2.4. The power to conduct regular visits is a requirement under OPCAT.⁵³ The SPT has advised that it is the government's responsibility to ensure that NPM bodies are able to conduct these visits in the manner that they see fit, with no restrictions on frequency.⁵⁴

Independence

2.5. Independence is a core aspect of an OPCAT NPM. Functional and financial independence ensures that NPMs are able to undertake their roles without interference or fear of reprisal.⁵⁵

2.6. Guidance from the SPT suggests that desirable characteristics of functional independence for an NPM include a statutory basis, defined terms of office for office holders, and clear grounds of dismissal. People should not be appointed to an NPM if they hold positions which could lead to perceptions of conflicts of interest.⁵⁶

⁵² Association for the Prevention of Torture, Comprehensive NPM assessment checklist, Association for the Prevention of Torture, Geneva, 2006, viewed 28 June 2019, <https://www.ap.torture.ch/content/files_res/NPM.checklong.pdf>.

See also: United Nations Subcommittee of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, Analytical assessment tool for national preventive mechanisms, UN Doc CAT/OP/1/Rev.1 (25 January 2016), s 11.

2.7. The SPT has previously been critical of inspectorates housed within their respective ministries, or connected financially, logistically or in a supervisory capacity within their ministries. The SPT has also expressed concern about the practice of post-visit reports being sent to ministers for review prior to publication.⁵⁷

2.8. Financial independence and the ability to make budgetary allocations according to priorities is another key requirement for NPMs. If the NPM performs functions apart from an OPCAT mandate, guidance suggests the NPM functions should be located within a separate unit or department with its own staff and budget. The relationship between the NPM function and the rest of the organisation, the working methods, and the safeguards applicable to preserve the independence of that function should be clearly set out in the relevant internal regulations.⁵⁸

Composition

2.9. It is important that inspection teams are representative in terms of professional expertise, gender balance and include people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds. This is in order to ensure that NPMs are able to effectively assess places of detention and take into account all relevant perspectives.

2.10. OPCAT requires that an NPM ensures its experts have “the required capabilities and professional knowledge”.⁵⁹ The APT has advised that preventive monitoring of places of detention depends upon inspecting teams being able to draw from knowledge in a wide range of fields, including justice and healthcare.⁶⁰ In practice, many NPMs supplement their core inspecting teams with external experts in order to adequately assess the treatment and conditions of those in detention. Such an approach offers NPMs flexibility in terms of bringing in expertise when and as required and minimises unnecessary ongoing cost.

Access to places

2.11. OPCAT requires an NPM to have unfettered access to all places where people are deprived of their liberty as well as access to all facilities and installations within all the places it can visit.⁶¹ The SPT has advised that the State should allow NPM bodies to visit all places, parts of places, and suspected places where deprivation of liberty occurs.

2.12. Full and free access is necessary in order for inspectors to accurately construct an impression of the conditions and treatment of detainees.⁶² Access to all areas within a place of detention also prevents detainees from being kept away from the inspecting team in an inaccessible part of the facility.

Access to information

2.13. When visiting places of detention an NPM inspection team requires access to all information regarding:⁶³

- the number of detainees.
- the places of detention.
- the treatment of detainees.
- their conditions of detention.

2.14. This includes medical records, registers, schedules, files and other data pertaining to the administration of places of detention and the treatment of detainees.

2.15. The APT's guidelines advise that authorities must ensure the legislation governing NPM bodies allows for their access to all such information and includes the ability to disclose or publish detainees' personal information, provided the individual consents to it being shared.

Access to persons

2.16. It is essential for NPM inspecting teams to be able to conduct private interviews with detainees at the time and in the location of their choice. In particular, the ability to speak privately ensures that people are able to speak openly about their conditions of detention or their concerns, without fear of reprisal.

2.17. OPCAT also envisages that NPMs may want to speak privately with members of staff at inspected facilities to gain their views and insights as to conditions of detention.

Ability to publish reports and make recommendations

2.18. The ability to publish reports and make recommendations is central to the work of an effective OPCAT NPM. Article 19 requires that NPM bodies have the power to make recommendations to the relevant authorities about improving the conditions and treatment of people in detention. NPMs should also have the ability to review and comment on proposed policy changes and legislative reforms that impact upon torture prevention.⁶⁴

2.19. In accordance with Article 22 of OPCAT, authorities shall examine the recommendations of the NPM and enter into dialogue with the NPM on possible implementation measures.

2.20. Under OPCAT, annual reports are required to be published and disseminated.⁶⁵ The APT acknowledges that it is up to the NPM to decide whether the annual report should be general in its discussion of its monitoring activities, or if its post-visit reports and recommendations should also be included.⁶⁶

Privileges, immunities and protections from reprisals

2.21. OPCAT specifies that any person or organisation that communicates with the NPM must not be prejudiced in any way and must be protected from any possible sanctions, whether the information communicated is true or false. The APT guidelines state that detainees, staff at places of detention, and members of civil society must feel comfortable in communicating with NPMs and that immunities from sanctions encourage more open communication.

2.22. In particular, the APT advises that detainees are the most vulnerable to retaliation when communicating information about their treatment and conditions. The SPT outlines that authorities are responsible for ensuring that no sanctions or reprisals are suffered by any person who has communicated with an NPM, in any way.⁶⁷ In practice, clear guidelines for maintaining the confidentiality of detainees and other sources should be established by NPMs. The issue of reprisals has been extended to focusing on ensuring that individuals who cooperate with United Nations treaty bodies are not the subject of reprisal, as set out in the Guidelines against Intimidation or Reprisal (the San José Guidelines).⁶⁸ International non-government organisations specialising in this work have developed a handbook on addressing reprisals by authorities, which recommends directly contacting the Secretariat of the SPT to notify it of any concerns.⁶⁹

Ability to contact the Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (SPT)

2.23. OPCAT requires that NPMs be given the right to communicate directly with the SPT.⁷⁰ Article 11(b) directs the SPT to strengthen the capacities of NPMs through training and technical assistance.⁷¹ The APT advises that these articles of the treaty enable exchanges on strategies to prevent torture at an international level.⁷²

Jurisdictional assessments of OPCAT readiness

Methodology

2.24. As a first step in assessing the level of OPCAT readiness in Australia, we undertook an exercise in mapping existing oversight and inspection bodies. This task was both larger and more complex than initially anticipated and highlighted the broad range of current oversight practices. The existing bodies we canvassed across the Commonwealth and the eight states and territories have developed different approaches to monitoring places of detention. These have been shaped by their respective legislation, traditions and conventions.

2.25. We initially contacted 55 bodies that we identified had a level of involvement in monitoring or inspecting places of detention. These bodies were asked to complete a baseline study tool based on the APT guidelines for NPMs.⁷³ See Appendix 2 for a copy of the template baseline study tool. The purpose of the baseline study tool was for bodies to provide a self-assessment of the extent to which they may or may not already meet the key components of NPM functions under OPCAT.

2.26. In recognition of the diversity of arrangements that exist within Australia, we have compiled these self-assessments on a jurisdictional basis. When each jurisdictional review is read together, the information provides an insight into Australia's current state of OPCAT readiness.

2.27. The following high level observations can be made:

- each jurisdiction has at least one body with a high level of functional independence and the ability to publically report.
- many bodies do not have a regular inspection regime, either because they lack the mandate to inspect other than in relation to a complaint, or have insufficient resources to enable regular inspection.
- there are issues for some bodies in relation to codifying structures that would support functional or financial independence, even where independence is achieved on an operational basis and entities consider themselves independent.

Commonwealth

2.28. We engaged with the following entities within this jurisdiction:

Australian Defence Force (ADF)

Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC)

National Children's Commission

Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman

2.29. The existing bodies within the Commonwealth that currently have an oversight or inspection mandate are the Commonwealth Ombudsman, the Australian Human Rights Commission (incorporating the National Children's Commissioner) and the Australian Defence Force.

2.30. Until recently, the Commonwealth was the only jurisdiction to have nominated its NPM — that is, this Office. For our part we intend to work closely with the AHRC in meeting the NPM mandate, acknowledging their expertise in human rights law and policy.

2.31. The Officer in Charge at the Defence Force Corrective Establishment (DFCE) has an inspections team which conducts annual inspections of area and unit command detention facilities across Australia, in accordance with the Defence Force Discipline Act 1982 (Cth) and the Defence Force Discipline Regulations 1985 (Cth).

2.32. As the recently announced NPM for Commonwealth places of detention, this Office does not currently inspect military detention facilities and Australian Federal Police places of detention. However, the Office will develop OPCAT compliant methodology for these places. Baseline assessments of facilities and risks assessments will also take place leading up to full OPCAT inspections from January 2021.

2.33. The Office has been visiting immigration detention facilities since 2004–05 and has been regularly inspecting these facilities since 2010–11. The current inspection regime is consistent with a number of OPCAT requirements. Inspections are conducted regularly and can be undertaken without notice, although notice is generally given. In the course of those inspections, Office staff have full, unescorted access to people, places and records within immigration detention facilities. The AHRC conducts announced visits to immigration detention facilities. In its response to the baseline assessment, the AHRC advised that during recent visits it had been unable to access personal information, including records, unless compelled under statute. However, it can receive personal information when conducting an inquiry under its legislation. The AHRC has inspection teams that are diverse in composition with a range of professional experience, and where relevant may include pro bono independent medical experts. Inspections do not occur on a set schedule and in recent years have been every 12–18 months.

2.34. The Office is now working on its methodology for the inspection of Commonwealth places of detention, such as building multi-disciplinary teams to ensure a more comprehensive and preventive approach.

2.35. The Office and the AHRC have statutory office holders who meet the OPCAT requirement for independence. Each agency has a budget appropriation and operates independently from the agencies they oversee and inspect. They also have the ability to publish reports on their activities. The Office does not currently publish post-visit reports on its inspections of immigration detention facilities, but identifies and publishes thematic issues in its annual reports. The AHRC publishes its findings after each visit and publishes annual reports.

2.36. This Office and the AHRC have the ability to make submissions on legislation, have legislated privileges, immunities and protections, and the ability to have direct and confidential contact with the SPT.

2.37. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within the Commonwealth, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.1.

Australian Capital Territory

2.38. We engaged with the following entities within this jurisdiction:

ACT Human Rights Commission

ACT Inspector of Correctional Services

ACT Official Visitor Scheme (Public Trustee and Guardian)

ACT Ombudsman⁷⁴

Children and Young People Commissioner and Public Advocate

2.39. The ACT Ombudsman, ACT Inspector of Correctional Services, the Official Visitor Scheme (administered by the Public Trustee and Guardian), the ACT Human Rights Commission, and the Children and Young People Commissioner and Public Advocate all meet the OPCAT requirements for functional independence, in that they are independent statutory authorities. With the exception of the ACT Ombudsman all other bodies have an inspections role. They vary in composition and expertise. The ACT Children and Young People Commissioner and Public Advocate has the widest variety of professional expertise, with backgrounds in mental health and forensic services, complex disability, child protection and youth justice.

2.40. The ACT bodies meet OPCAT requirements in respect of the ability to make recommendations to an agency and make submissions, proposals and observations on relevant legislation. If recommendations are made, an agency is required to engage with them. They also all have a legislative right to full access to staff and detainees, and other relevant people, places and records of detention. They also have protections from reprisals and the right to hold information confidentially. While the ability to contact the SPT is yet to be tested, the Australian Capital Territory has enacted legislation for the SPT to access information, people and places of detention in accordance with OPCAT.⁷⁵

2.41. The ACT Official Visitor Scheme publishes an annual report and makes post-visit reports to its minister and relevant directorates. The Inspector of Correctional Services publishes a standalone annual report The Office of the ACT Inspector of Correctional Services was established in December 2017 and was designed to reflect OPCAT requirements.⁷⁶ Its legislation requires that draft copies of reports must be provided to the relevant minister with an opportunity to comment at least six weeks before giving them to the ACT Legislative Assembly.⁷⁷

2.42. The ACT Ombudsman has an oversight and complaint investigation role. It does not have a regular inspections mandate and is required by legislation to consult with the Inspector of Correctional Services regarding investigations involving a detainee or correctional facility. It can visit the Alexander Maconochie Centre (the adult prison in the Australian Capital Territory) for the purpose of viewing policies and operating procedures.

2.43. While an NPM has not yet been nominated, all the bodies mentioned above work closely together to seek to provide coherent oversight of the Alexander Maconochie Centre. All Australian Capital Territory bodies have the ability to access Bimberi Youth Justice Centre, but the ACT Inspector of Correctional Services and the ACT Ombudsman cannot access Dhulwa Mental Health Unit.

2.44. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within the Australian Capital Territory, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.2.

New South Wales

2.45. We engaged with the following entities within this jurisdiction:

Law Enforcement Conduct Commission

NSW Ombudsman

Office of the Advocate for Children and Young People

Office of the Children’s Guardian

Inspector of Custodial Services NSW

Official Visitor Program

2.46. The Inspector of Custodial Services and the Official Visitors Program (Mental Health) both have an existing inspection role in places of detention. The NSW Ombudsman does not have a specific inspection role but can visit places of detention. The NSW Ombudsman and the Inspector of Custodial Services⁷⁸ both meet the requirements for independence and public reporting, as these are provided for in their enabling legislation. The Official Visitors Program (Mental Health) has a level of independence — however, Official Visitors may be removed from office at any time by the Minister for Health.

2.47. In terms of the composition of visiting teams, the NSW Ombudsman and the Inspector of Custodial Services have staff who identify as Indigenous. At the time of completing the baseline assessment, both bodies reported having a majority of female officers on their visiting teams, as did the Official Visitors Program (Mental Health).

2.48. The Inspector of Custodial Services, the Official Visitors Program (Mental Health) and the Ombudsman have all reported that they are able to conduct unannounced visits to places of detention and that they are able to access all areas and installations within the facilities. Visiting teams from these bodies are able to speak with detainees and staff in any location of their choosing. These bodies have also reported having the ability to access all information and records within the places of detention that they can visit.

2.49. The NSW Ombudsman and the Inspector of Custodial Services have protections against the disclosure of information to government, with the latter advising that information must not be disclosed in a report to Parliament if there is an overriding public interest against its disclosure.⁷⁹ It is also an offence to obstruct officers from the two entities in the exercise of their functions and both bodies have legislative protections against interference of communication with detainees. The Official Visitors Program (Mental Health) has fewer legislated protections, with no offences for obstructing an official visitor and no defined protections from interference with communication.

2.50. The Inspector of Custodial Services, the Official Visitors Program (Mental Health) and the Ombudsman indicated a level of uncertainty about their ability to have direct and confidential contact with the SPT.

2.51. The Official Visitors Program (Corrections and Juvenile Justice), the Advocate for Children and Young People, the Law Enforcement Conduct Commission and the Children's Guardian all advised they do not have an inspection mandate. Official Visitors (Corrections and Juvenile Justice) are appointed by the Minister for Corrections or the Minister for Families, Communities and Disability Services and overseen by the Inspector of Custodial Services. The Advocate for Children and Young People advised it is an independent statutory officer appointed by the Governor and has the ability to consult with juveniles in detention.

2.52. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within New South Wales, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.3.

Northern Territory

2.53. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Attorney General and Minister for Justice (Official Visitor and Youth Justice Advisory Committee)

Community Visitor Program

Northern Territory Ombudsman

Office of the Children's Commission

2.54. There is a range of entities in the Northern Territory that fulfil various inspection, oversight, visiting and complaint-handling roles in places of detention. However, there is not a fully independent, regular preventive prison inspection system.

2.55. The Northern Territory Ombudsman, Children's Commissioner and the Community Visitor Program:

- are functionally independent.
- have autonomy in relation to resource expenditure.
- have the right to access information and people in detention.
- are able to make post-visit reports.
- are able to make recommendations.
- are able to publish annual reports.
- are able to make submissions on relevant legislation.

⁷⁹ Inspector of Custodial Services Act 2012 (NSW), ss 15 and 25. Schedules 1 and 2 of the Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 (NSW).

- have legislative bases for privileges, immunities and protections.
- are able to contact the SPT.

2.56. The Community Visitor Program focuses on specialised disability residential facilities and is required under its legislation to have a multi-expert professional team. It has a recruitment strategy to expand the cultural diversity of its composition. The reports by Community Visitors go to the Principal Community Visitor and are then provided to the manager of a facility or agency.

2.57. The Children’s Commissioner visits and monitors conditions in youth detention centres in the Northern Territory, but has no statutory power to inspect facilities. Inspections can take place with the consent of the relevant government agency. Draft reports are provided to relevant government agencies for comment before the final report goes to the minister for tabling in the Legislative Assembly. The Ombudsman has an oversight role and its inspections and visits of places of detention occur on an ad hoc basis, using its preliminary enquiry or formal investigation powers.

2.58. The Official Visitor and Youth Justice Advisory Committee within the Department of Justice and Attorney-General has an inspection mandate and its Official Visitors are personally independent of the facilities they inspect. It is the only regular inspector of Northern Territory prisons, but it is not financially independent and cannot access prisoner files or medical records. Official Visitors engage with prisoners who request to speak to them. They cannot speak with staff (apart from obtaining general information) and cannot make public reports on their inspections.

2.59. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within the Northern Territory, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.4.

Queensland

2.60. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Crime and Corruption Commission

Department of Youth Justice / Youth Detention Inspectorate

Director of Forensic Disability

Office of the Chief Inspector of Correctional Services

Office of the Chief Psychiatrist

Office of the Health Ombudsman

Office of the Public Guardian (Community Visitor Program)

Queensland Family and Child Commission

Queensland Ombudsman

2.61. Of the eight bodies that are involved in places of detention in Queensland, the Office of the Chief Inspector and the Youth Detention Inspectorate are inspectorates within their government departments. They are not functionally independent and their post-visit reports and recommendations are made to the Commissioner for Corrective Services and the Chief Executive of the Department of Youth Justice, respectively. They may contribute to their wider agencies’ annual reports.

2.62. The lack of independence and public reporting for these bodies has been the subject of broader reviews.⁸⁰ The Queensland Government is progressing an options paper prepared by the ⁸⁰ K McMillan (chairperson), Independent review of youth detention, report, Queensland, December 2016.

Queensland Family and Child Commission on this topic. The Queensland Crime and Corruption Commission has acknowledged there is a need to withhold certain information about the correctional facilities so as not to jeopardise the security of the facilities. However, it recommended in its 2018 corruption enquiry into corrective services facilities that for the Office of the Chief Inspector’s inspection function to be truly effective, reports should be publically available.⁸¹ The Queensland Government has advised that it supports the establishment of an independent inspectorate, which will inspect both adult and juvenile facilities.⁸²

2.63. The Ombudsman, the Community Visitor Program administered by the Office of the Public Guardian, the Director of Forensic Disability, the Crime and Corruption Commission, the Queensland Family and Child Commission, and the Office of the Chief Psychiatrist are all independent statutory authorities which meet the functional independence requirements of OPCAT. The Health Ombudsman has a degree of independence but comes under the oversight of the minister.

2.64. The Ombudsman and the Health Ombudsman have oversight roles and visit facilities in relation to complaints. The Ombudsman also inspects all adult prisons and youth detention centres, public hospitals and health services and other facilities annually and conducts investigations in accordance with its legislation. The Crime and Corruption Commission can access facilities only in relation to the investigation of a complaint — in the Commission’s case, if it is in relation to a corruption or crime investigation. The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist is also limited to accessing closed facilities in relation to an investigation, in line with its core functions under the Mental Health Act 2016 (QLD). The Director of Forensic Disability does not have an explicit legislative inspection function, but has statutory obligations to oversee the Forensic Disability Service through monitoring and auditing legislative compliance. The Office of the Public Guardian’s Community Visitor Program has an oversight function.

2.65. The role of the Office of the Public Guardian’s Community Visitor Program is restricted to visiting only minors in the Brisbane watch house, and 17 year olds located in adult correctional facilities. However, following the commencement of the Youth Justice and Other Legislation (Inclusion of 17-year-old Persons) Amendment Act 2016 (Qld) and the Youth Justice (Transitional) Regulation 2018, there are no longer any such minors staying in adult correctional facilities. These legislative amendments came into effect on 12 February 2018, and the Office of the Public Guardian reports that its last visit with a young person in an adult facility occurred in November 2018 and that young person was then released in December 2018.

2.66. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within Queensland, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.5.

South Australia

2.67. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Community Visitor Scheme

Department for Correctional Services - Visiting Inspectors

Office for Public Integrity and Independent Commissioner Against Corruption

Office of the Chief Psychiatrist

⁸¹ A MacSporran (chairperson), Taskforce Flaxton – an examination of corruption risks in corrective services facilities, report, Crime and Corruption Commission (Queensland), Brisbane, 2018.

⁸² Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women (Queensland), Oversight recommendations, Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women (Queensland), Brisbane, 2019, viewed 28 June 2019, <<https://www.csyw.qld.gov.au/youth-justice/youth-detention-review-implementation/implementing-review-recommendations/oversight-recommendations>>.

2.68. There is a range of entities in South Australia that fulfil various inspection, oversight, visiting and complaint-handling roles in places of detention. However, all are limited in one or more respects — so there is not currently a regular, preventive prison inspection system with independent institutional capability.

2.69. Of those bodies, the Ombudsman, the Office for Public Integrity and Independent Commissioner against Corruption, and the Commissioner for Children and Young People do not have a regular inspection function. The Ombudsman has the power to enter and inspect agency premises for the purpose of investigating a complaint or an investigation on the Ombudsman's own initiative. The facilities that the Ombudsman may inspect, if relevant to an investigation, include juvenile detention, adult prisons, police lock-ups (where the Ombudsman is investigating treatment of prisoners within those lock-ups), forensic disability facilities and mental health facilities. The Office for Public Integrity and Independent Commissioner against Corruption can inspect police premises for the purpose of an investigation. The Office of the Public Advocate has a visiting role in adult prisons, closed psychiatric facilities, the Forensic Mental Health Service and all closed wards in aged care residential facilities and secure dementia units. It can conduct investigations into these facilities as directed by the South Australian Civil and Administrative Tribunal.

2.70. The Training Centre Visitor and the Community Visitor Scheme, both have an inspection role and are functionally independent, have diverse team composition, and the ability to make post visit reports and publish annual reports. The Training Centre Visitor inspects the Adelaide Youth Training Centre. The Community Visitor Scheme inspects closed psychiatric facilities and closed forensic disability facilities.

2.71. Visiting Inspectors are appointed and administered by the Department for Correctional Services. They can access people, places and records (except medical records) in relation to adult prisons, but are not functionally independent. Visiting Inspectors make post-visit reports which are provided to the relevant minister. Visiting Inspectors do not publish annual reports of their inspections and do not have legislative protections and immunities. They are bound by legislative confidentiality provisions. They do not have a legislative mandate to contact the SPT, but are not prevented from doing so.

2.72. The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist (OCP) has statutory monitoring and inspection functions, such as the ability to inspect premises and to require the production of documents. It falls within the management of the Department for Health and Wellbeing and does not have complete discretion in its allocation of resourcing. The OCP's post-visit reports and recommendations are provided to the chief executive officer and mental health executive teams, and if necessary to the Chief Executive of the Department for Health and Wellbeing. The OCP does publish an annual report. The OCP does not have formal legal protections from arrest or interference with communications, but is able to hold confidential information. The OCP has no legislative basis for contact with the SPT but is not prevented from doing so. The OCP may not be able to share information arising from its inspections with the SPT.

2.73. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within South Australia, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.6.

Tasmania

2.74. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Commission for Children and Young People

The Mental Health Official Visitor and Prison Official Visitor, administered by Ombudsman Tasmania

Office of the Custodial Inspector (who is also the Ombudsman)

2.75. The Custodial Inspector, Mental Health Official Visitor and Prison Official Visitor have an inspection function, are functionally independent, have the ability to make post-visit reports and are mandated to publish annual reports. In some cases other reports are also mandated, for example the Principal Official Visitor is required to report on some matters under the Mental Health Act 2013. These bodies have the ability to access information, people and records. The Official Visitor schemes do not have legislative bases to make post-visit recommendations, or to require a relevant authority to engage with those recommendations or make submissions on relevant legislation. However, under section 165 of the Mental Health Act 2013 and section 10 of the Corrections Act 1997 Official Visitors can report to the relevant Minister on various matters. The Official Visitor schemes have limited protections against reprisals and do not have a clear ability to engage with the SPT.

2.76. The Commissioner for Children and Young People has an oversight function, rather than an inspection function. The Commissioner can access detention centres, take copies of records, hold private interviews with detainees of their choosing, and speak with staff. The legislation establishing the Commissioner's role requires it to provide draft reports to the minister. It is mandated to publish an annual report.

2.77. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within Tasmania, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.7.

Victoria

2.78. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Commission for Children and Young People (CCYP)

Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission (IBAC)

Justice Assurance and Review Office

Mental Health Complaints Commissioner

Office of the Chief Psychiatrist

Office of the Public Advocate (OPA)

Victorian Ombudsman

2.79. In Victoria, there is a patchwork of entities that fulfil various inspection, oversight, visiting and complaint-handling roles in places of detention. Several of them possess legislative and organisational characteristics that are consistent with OPCAT articles. The Victorian Ombudsman has taken a lead role in trialling an OPCAT-style inspection on two recent occasions. However, there is not currently any one entity that fulfils a regular, preventive, independent prison inspection mandate.

2.80. The Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission (IBAC) has jurisdiction to enter, search and inspect police personnel premises, including a police gaol, where relevant to an investigation. IBAC possesses legislative and organisational characteristics that are consistent with

OPCAT Articles. It is a statutory office holder with functional independence and autonomy over resources. In particular IBAC has:

- both an inspection and oversight role for police cells and gaols.
- the power to conduct own motion investigations in relation to police cells.
- statutory powers of entry and inspection of police cells.
- the right to access information in relation to police cells.
- the power to make recommendations in relation to an investigation.

2.81. The Commission for Children and Young People:

- has an investigation and oversight role with respect to a wide range of facilities that accommodate children.
- is a statutory office holder with functional independence and autonomy over resources
- has the right to access information, people and places of detention.
- has the ability to make post-visit reports, publish reports and publish an annual report.
- has the ability to make post-visit recommendations and have relevant authorities engage with those recommendations.
- has the ability to engage with the SPT.

2.82. The Independent Visitor Program administered by the CCYP, and the Community Visitors Program (Disability) and Community Visitors Program (Mental Health), administered by the OPA:

- have both an inspection and oversight (or visiting) role.
- are functionally independent.
- have the ability to privately speak to their choice of interviewee, make post-visit reports, make recommendations and publish an annual report.

2.83. The degree of access to places of detention and to records varies between bodies. None of these bodies have formal legislative protections against reprisals.

2.84. The Victorian Ombudsman:

- has an investigation and oversight role with respect to a wide range of facilities.
- has statutory powers of entry and inspection.
- is a statutory office holder with functional independence and autonomy over resources.
- has the right to access information, people and places of detention.
- has the ability to make post-visit reports, publish reports and publish an annual report.
- has the ability to make post-visit recommendations and have relevant authorities engage with those recommendations.
- has legislative protections from reprisals and interference with communications.
- has the ability to engage with the SPT.

2.85. The Victorian Ombudsman conducted an OPCAT-style inspection of a women's prison in 2017. In 2019 the Ombudsman also conducted an OPCAT-style multi-disciplinary, multi-agency thematic inspection of three facilities, considering practices relating to solitary confinement of children and young people.

2.86. The following bodies have an oversight but not inspection role:

- Mental Health Complaints Commissioner.
- Office of the Chief Psychiatrist (which also has an investigation role. The Office also has statutory powers of entry and inspection and rights to access information, people and places of detention.)
- Justice Assurance and Review Office (JARO).

2.87. In Victoria there are four different types of Visitors, each with their own mandates and functions:

- a) Community Visitors Program (Disability), administered by OPA.
- b) Community Visitors Program (Mental Health), administered by OPA.
- c) Independent Prison Visitors' Scheme, administered by JARO.
- d) Independent Visitor Program, administered by the CCYP.

2.88. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within Victoria, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.8.

Western Australia

2.89. We engaged with the following entities in this jurisdiction:

Commission for Children and Young People

Department of Justice WA, Aboriginal Visitor Scheme

The Health and Disability Services Complaints Office

Mental Health Advocacy Service

Office of the Chief Psychiatrist

Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administrative Investigations (Western Australia Ombudsman)

2.90. The Ombudsman, the Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services⁸³ (including the administration of the Independent Visitor Service), the Office of the Chief Psychiatrist, the Chief Advocate for the Bennett Brook Disability Justice Centre, and the Mental Health Advocacy Service:

- are all independent statutory authorities with inspection mandates for places of detention.
- have varied team composition and professional expertise.
- have the ability to make unannounced visits, access information, and privately interview detainees and staff.
- have the ability to make post-visit reports and recommendations, including engagement with authorities on those recommendations.
- make submissions on relevant legislation, publish an annual report, and have legislative protections from interference.

2.91. Of all of the bodies in Australia with an inspection or oversight function, the Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services appears to be the most advanced in terms of OPCAT compliant inspections. It has been considered by other jurisdictions as a regime that could be modelled.⁸⁴

2.92. The Mental Health Advocacy Service and the Chief Advocate for the Disability Justice Centre do not report to Parliament, but have other reporting mechanisms. The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist reports to Parliament, however it is not required to lay each report before Parliament.

⁸³ Sections 17 and 18 of the Inspector of Custodial Services Act 2003 (WA) relate to directions the minister may give to the inspector and ministerial access to information held by the inspector. However, the independence of both the Inspector of Custodial Services and the Western Australian Ombudsman are protected through reporting to Parliament, rather than to a minister. They are not accountable to the Executive arm of government.

⁸⁴ Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women (Queensland), Oversight recommendations, Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women (Queensland), Brisbane, 2019, viewed 28 June 2019, <<https://www.csyw.qld.gov.au/youth-justice/youth-detention-review-implementation/implementing-review-recommendations/oversight-recommendations>>.

2.93. The Health and Disability Services Complaints Office reports to the Minister for Health and has a visiting role, but has no specific powers to conduct inspections. The Commissioner for Children and Young People is an independent statutory office and has a monitoring and advocacy role, rather than a specific inspections role. We were advised by the Western Australian Attorney-General that the Aboriginal Visitor Scheme does not have an inspectorate role.

2.94. The snapshot of the level of OPCAT readiness by bodies within Western Australia, as provided by each body is at Appendix 3.9.

2.95. Importantly, on 17 July 2019, the Western Australian Government advised that the Western Australian Ombudsman and the Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services had been appointed as the NPMs for Western Australia's mental health and other secure facilities, and justice-related facilities including police holding cells, respectively.

Mapping places of detention - existing arrangements in Australia

OPCAT implementation in Australia – utilising existing bodies

2.96. The Australian Government has made it clear that it is a matter for each state and territory to identify NPMs for their jurisdiction. It is open to jurisdictions to create a new entity to fulfil the role, or to adapt the existing role of an entity or entities to fulfil the NPM function.

2.97. The NPM bodies will be responsible for inspecting places of detention within their jurisdiction and making recommendations about detainees' treatment and conditions.

2.98. The actual number and physical location of facilities within each of the primary places of detention and within each jurisdiction are yet to be comprehensively mapped. For an overview of the facilities that are estimated to fall within each primary place of detention in the Commonwealth, states and territories, see Table 1 and Table 2.

2.99. The requirement to regularly visit places of detention will require examination of the number and types of facilities across Australia that meet the definition of primary places of detention. This will also require consideration as to the level of resourcing needed to monitor the conditions and treatment of detainees in each of those facilities, in a regular preventive manner.

Current oversight coverage

2.100. Our mapping of places of detention has also identified gaps in coverage by highlighting places where there is currently no independent monitoring of places of detention.

2.101. An example of a gap in oversight is police lock-ups and station cells across Australia. Table 3 shows the level of oversight nationally.

Table 3 – Oversight of police lock-ups and police station cells

Jurisdiction	Inspection Bodies
Australian Federal Police cells in the Australian Capital Territory, the External Territories and Norfolk Island.	Commonwealth Ombudsman (yet to commence inspections as part of NPM inspectorate role).
Police cells in New South Wales.	Nil.
Police cells in Victoria.	Victorian Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission (IBAC) can enter search and inspect police personnel premises including a police gaol, where relevant to an investigation. Victorian Ombudsman (Melbourne Custody Centre, Moorabbin Justice Centre, Ringwood Court Cells).
Police cells in the Northern Territory.	Northern Territory Ombudsman (on an ad hoc basis).
Police cells in Queensland.	Queensland Crime and Corruption Commission (only if relevant to a crime or corruption investigation). Community Visitor Program (for minors in Brisbane Watch house only).
Police cells in South Australia.	Nil.
Police cells in Tasmania.	Ombudsman Tasmania (if relevant to an investigation into administrative action taken by a police authority).
Police cells in Western Australia.	Western Australian Ombudsman (has jurisdiction, but does not currently undertake regular inspections). Inspector of Custodial Services (will be responsible for the oversight of all justice-related facilities, including police lock-ups).

2.102. These gaps in the oversight of police lock-ups and station cells will require careful consideration when determining the designation and scope of NPMs. Once NPMs have been designated and inspection regimes established, jurisdictions should further consider how to address any gaps to ensure the progressive implementation of OPCAT.

2.103. There is some overlap where a number of different bodies within a jurisdiction may access a particular place or type of detention, each under their own mandate. Some bodies that already have a legislated ability to access facilities are only able to do so for the purpose of investigating complaints, allegations of corruption, or responding to systemic issues. Such bodies may require a change in scope, objective and inspection methodology if designated as an NPM with a regular, preventive focus.

2.104. A factor for jurisdictions to consider as part of the NPM designation is the extent to which current areas of overlap can be minimised, particularly in a resource constrained environment. While at first glance it may appear that a number of bodies overlap in their ability to access a place of detention, this does not necessarily result in a duplication of effort. Inspection and oversight bodies have different priorities and will need to appropriately manage their access to a place of detention in order to achieve consistency.

2.105. The following tables provide a snapshot of the overlap between entities which have the ability to access or have qualified access to places of detention within each jurisdiction.

¹⁰⁷ Limited to access to all facilities in Queensland if relevant to the performance of a corruption or crime investigation.

¹⁰⁸ No inspection role as such, only for a complaint in line with core functions.

¹⁰⁹ The Office of the Public Guardian Community Visitor Program in adult correctional facilities is limited to 17 year olds only. However, there are no longer any such minors staying in adult correctional facilities, following the commencement of the Youth Justice and Other Legislation (Inclusion of 17-year-old Persons) Amendment Act 2016 (Qld) and the Youth Justice (Transitional) Regulation 2018. The legislative amendments commenced on 12 February 2018, and OPG report that their last visit with a young person in an adult facility occurred in November 2018 and the young person was then released in December 2018.

¹¹⁰ If the Crime and Corruption Commission has grounds to suspect corrupt conduct by way of the unlawful treatment of a person.

¹¹¹ The Community Visitor Program in Brisbane watch house relates to minors only.

¹¹² The Crime and Corruption Commission is able to access the official premises of a unit of public administration, as defined under s 73 of the Crime and Corruption Act 2001 (Qld).

¹¹³ The Ombudsman is able to access any facility if relevant to an Ombudsman investigation.

¹¹⁴ Staff of the Public Advocate do not carry out inspections, but do visit clients and conduct investigations as directed by the South Australian Civil and Administrative Tribunal (SACAT).

¹¹⁵ May visit a forensic patient who is in a prison as a consequence of being placed on a ministerial direction. Approval from the Department for Correctional Services must be obtained for a visit to proceed. Can include any prison in South Australia.

¹¹⁶ The Commissioner for Children and Young People is an independent statutory office that advocates for the rights and wellbeing of all children and young people in Tasmania. The CCYP does not have the function or power to inspect places of detention as contemplated by OPCAT.

¹¹⁷ The principal role of the Ombudsman is to enquire into or investigate any administrative action taken by or in an authority. The Ombudsman’s jurisdiction covers most places where people are or may be deprived of their liberty, either by an order given by a state public authority or at its instigation or with its consent or acquiescence. Inspections may be conducted during an investigation.

¹¹⁸ No inspection role, only for a complaint in line with core functions.

¹¹⁹ The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist does not have a general inspection function. It has broad powers of entry to mental health service providers to conduct investigations, clinical practice orders and clinical reviews for the purpose of improving quality and safety.

¹²⁰ Visitors are nominated by the Minister for Corrections on the recommendation of JARO, outlined in s 35 of Victoria’s Corrections Act 1986.

¹²¹ JARO does not have a legislated power to inspect. Visits are arranged directly with prisons and youth justice facilities as required when conducting reviews in response to reports of significant incidents.

¹²² The Office of the Public Advocate advised that the Community Visitors Program (Disability) visits a range of disability services across the state (including closed forensic disability facilities), but does not visit closed psychiatric disability facilities.

¹²³ The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist does not have a general inspection function. It has broad powers of entry to mental health service providers for the purpose of improving quality and safety.

¹²⁴ The MHCC advised it can enter Thomas Embling Hospital as it is part of Forensicare, a designated mental health service, but is unable to enter other ‘closed forensic disability facilities’ such as the Disability Forensic Assessment and Treatment Service in Fairfield.

¹²⁵ The Ombudsman does not have jurisdiction over Victoria Police. However, it does have jurisdiction over the Melbourne Custody Centre, as Victoria Police has contracted out its operation and the contractor falls within the scope of the Ombudsman Act 1973 (VIC).

¹²⁶ The Victorian Office of the Chief Psychiatrist advised it has oversight of both closed psychiatric facilities as well as other (including disability residential services, mental health service providers and secure welfare units).

¹²⁷ For the purposes of conducting an investigation, under s 21 of the Parliamentary Commissioner Act 1971 (WA) the Ombudsman is able to enter and inspect any premises occupied or used by any department or authority to which the Act applies.

¹²⁸ Health and Disability Services (Complaints) Act 1995 (WA) provides the HaDSCO Director with powers to obtain information and entry to premises for the purpose of an investigation.

¹³⁰ The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist has oversight of closed psychiatric disability facilities.

¹³¹ Police lock-ups (in regional courts) that have been prescribed to be used as court custody centres, in accordance with ss 19 and 20 of the Western Australian Inspector of Custodial Services Act 2003 and the Court Security and Custodial Services Regulations 1999. Going forward, it is intended that this expand to include any Western Australian police lock-up.

¹³² The Office of the Chief Psychiatrist has oversight of mental health services within hospitals for both voluntary admissions of people with a mental illness, and people with a mental illness and a co-morbid physical illness.

PART 3: NEXT STEPS

Where to from here?

3.1. This report demonstrates that Australia begins OPCAT implementation with a range of existing entities that meet many of the OPCAT NPM requirements. There are numerous oversight and inspection regimes that have the capacity to either become an NPM or play a role in an NPM network.

Designation

3.2. Although a basis exists for OPCAT implementation, decisive action is needed in the designation of NPMs across Australia. With only 16 months remaining in the commencement period there is a sense of urgency as there are limits to what can be done in the absence of a known NPM network.

Legislation

3.3. Governments should consider the extent (if any) to which legislation is required to be introduced to support the visiting and unfettered access functions of the SPT. The Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory are examples of jurisdictions that have passed such legislation.¹³³ More generally, informed by the contents of this report, each jurisdiction should consider the extent to which legislative change is needed to meet the tests imposed by OPCAT.

Resourcing

3.4. Regardless of whether existing bodies are provided with an NPM mandate or new bodies are established, consideration must be given to the provision of adequate resourcing in order to achieve OPCAT objectives. International experience suggests that it is an ongoing issue for NPMs to ensure they have the resources to continue with their existing mandates, as well as establishing an effective regular inspection regime with a sufficient level of staff, preparing reports and recommendations, and making submissions on relevant legislation. The reality is that, over time, each jurisdiction will require additional funding to provide regular preventive oversight to all places where people are deprived of their liberty required by OPCAT.

3.5. When considering resourcing, in the 2017–18 financial year the Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services (Western Australia) employed 20 staff at a cost of $3.659 million to oversee 17 prisons, five prison work camps, one juvenile detention centre and all court custody centres and police lock-ups that are prescribed court custody centres.¹³⁴ The New South Wales Office of the Inspector of Custodial Services has a budget of $2.824 million, with 13 staff to oversee 40 correctional centres, six transitional centres and residential facilities, six juvenile justice centres, 12 24-hour court cell complexes, 64 court cell locations, 113 escort vehicles and 25 detainee transport vehicles.¹³⁵

3.6. The SPT recommends that dedicated funding be prescribed for the specific purpose of the NPM, in those bodies with wider institutional mandates. Where the SPT has made recommendations during country visits, there is also scope to seek funding to implement those recommendations

¹³³ Monitoring of Places of Detention (Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture) Act 2018 (ACT) and Monitoring of Places of Detention (Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture) Act 2018 (NT).

through the UN SPT Special Fund.¹³⁶ For example, funding was provided by the UN SPT Special Fund for the 2017 New Zealand NPM independently-commissioned report on seclusions and restraints. This occurred after the SPT visited New Zealand in 2013 and made specific recommendations to immediately stop holding people in restrictive detention based on their perceived security risk.¹³⁷

3.7. A regular preventive inspection regime of places of detention, especially in places where there has previously been little or no oversight, will require additional resources to be effective. The journey towards effective OPCAT implementation is not merely a matter of conferring further functions on existing oversight bodies, or renaming existing practices as being in accordance with OPCAT and assuming that these bodies can continue to operate in a business as usual model. In order to have an effective and regular preventive inspection regime, bodies will require new or expanded methods of operation. These will need commensurate increases in resourcing over time in most, if not all, jurisdictions.

Cooperation

3.8. Article 22 of OPCAT requires authorities to examine the recommendations of the NPMs and enter into a dialogue about implementing those recommendations.

Once NPMs have been identified, the Office will consider:¹³⁸

- developing standard practices to ensure that draft legislation relevant to torture and ill-treatment prevention is routinely sent to NPMs for comment.
- developing a Memorandum of Understanding to facilitate cooperation within and across jurisdictions and set out clear guidelines on how they will interact.
- facilitating workshops and training along thematic lines and consider particular practices that cut across places of detention, such as disability, and the use of restraints.
- developing protocols on sharing and protecting information between entities across jurisdictions.

3.9. In conjunction with the NPM Coordinator, each jurisdiction may wish to consider establishing:¹³⁹

- mechanisms for engaging and cooperating with relevant authorities across jurisdictions on responding to and implementing recommendations, including establishing procedures where urgent action is required.
- means for addressing and resolving operational difficulties that may occur during the course of an NPM exercising its duties, such as during visits.
- policies for publicising reports, or parts of reports such as main findings and recommendations.
- policies regarding the production and publication of thematic reports.

- 3.10. Jurisdictions may also wish to consider the possibility of sharing expertise in order to:
- properly resource multi-disciplinary teams and supplement medical and inspectorate expertise between the Commonwealth, state and territory NPMs.
 - enable unannounced visits to remote facilities.

Widening of scope

3.11. International experience has shown that even where countries have started OPCAT inspections of a narrower range of places, it is likely to broaden over time to encompass more places of detention. For example, the New Zealand Ombudsman's NPM mandate expanded in 2018 to include monitoring dementia units in private aged care facilities — 11 years after the Ombudsman was first designated as an NPM. Gradual expansion is likely, to enable each jurisdiction time to prepare, implement training and develop cooperative arrangements with each other.

Principles and standards

3.12. While canvassing bodies that already have an inspectorate role, we asked for information about their principles, standards and inspection methodologies. The results varied — some bodies inspect strictly in accordance with their legislative requirements and others in a manner consistent with international guidance.

3.13. As the NPM Coordinator the Office will consult further with those bodies designated to form the NPM network, with a view to identifying commonalities where appropriate. We will also consider relevant international standards and how these can be incorporated into inspection regimes.

The role of civil society

3.14. International experience shows that civil society plays an important part in OPCAT implementation and that early engagement enhances the credibility and visibility of the NPM.¹⁴⁰ The work of the NPM network is likely to be informed by the views of civil society and by lived experience of detention. NPMs may seek to apply civil society's knowledge and expertise. Once NPMs are established, they may wish to consider whether relevant civil society representatives could inform their inspection regimes, such as through the establishment of formal advisory committees, or informal ad hoc advice or submissions. It may also be appropriate in some circumstances for civil society representatives to participate in inspections.

3.15. In our function as the NPM Coordinator, the Office is planning to form a civil society advisory group to help inform priorities in the years ahead.

Conclusion

3.16. Currently, Australia is not fully OPCAT ready. We are now more than halfway through the three year OPCAT implementation period. Decisive action must be taken quickly, particularly by those jurisdictions that have not yet nominated NPMs, in order to ensure that Australia meets our international human rights obligations. The SPT will be looking to Australia to successfully demonstrate how an NPM network can work in a federated system and has recently announced it will visit Australia in the coming months.

3.17. NPMs, whether they are new bodies or modified from existing entities, will need time to develop methodologies and ensure they are ready for the start of OPCAT inspections.

¹⁴⁰ Association for the Prevention of Torture, Civil society, Association for the Prevention of Torture, Geneva, 2019, viewed 28 June 2019, <<https://apt.ch/en/civil-society/>>.

3.18. This report has identified that all jurisdictions have various entities in place which are empowered to undertake and report on inspections of places of detention. While there is some variation in terms of OPCAT readiness, one or more existing bodies in each jurisdiction are likely to be able to meet the NPM obligations — provided that amendments are made to ensure that gaps are covered where necessary.

3.19. International experience has shown that OPCAT implementation, especially involving a multiple body NPM, is likely to be an iterative process. There is no single approach to OPCAT implementation that has been adopted across countries, approaches vary in the manner and frequency of inspections. However, inability to achieve perfection from the start should not be an excuse for inaction.

3.20. We are pleased with the level of cooperation and collaboration from bodies we approached in the preparation of this report. A substantial body of expertise already exists in Australia regarding many of the aspects of OPCAT compliance.

3.21. It is in this spirit of cooperation that we look forward to working with all jurisdictions to advance OPCAT implementation in Australia.

APPENDIX 1 – OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION
AGAINST TORTURE AND OTHER CRUEL, INHUMAN OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT

Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment

Adopted on 18 December 2002 at the fifty-seventh session of the General Assembly of the United Nations by resolution A/RES/57/199 entered into force on 22 June 2006

PREAMBLE

The States Parties to the present Protocol,

Reaffirming that torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are prohibited and constitute serious violations of human rights,

Convinced that further measures are necessary to achieve the purposes of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (hereinafter referred to as the Convention) and to strengthen the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Recalling that articles 2 and 16 of the Convention oblige each State Party to take effective measures to prevent acts of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in any territory under its jurisdiction,

Recognizing that States have the primary responsibility for implementing those articles, that strengthening the protection of people deprived of their liberty and the full respect for their human rights is a common responsibility shared by all and that international implementing bodies complement and strengthen national measures,

Recalling that the effective prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment requires education and a combination of various legislative, administrative, judicial and other measures,

Recalling also that the World Conference on Human Rights firmly declared that efforts to eradicate torture should first and foremost be concentrated on prevention and called for the adoption of an optional protocol to the Convention, intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention,

Convinced that the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment can be strengthened by non-judicial means of a preventive nature, based on regular visits to places of detention, Have agreed as follows:

PART I

General principles

Article 1

The objective of the present Protocol is to establish a system of regular visits undertaken by independent international and national bodies to places where people are deprived of their liberty, in order to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 2

1. A Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment of the Committee against Torture (hereinafter referred to as the Subcommittee on Prevention) shall be established and shall carry out the functions laid down in the present Protocol.
2. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall carry out its work within the framework of the Charter of the United Nations and shall be guided by the purposes and principles thereof, as well as the norms of the United Nations concerning the treatment of people deprived of their liberty.
3. Equally, the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be guided by the principles of confidentiality, impartiality, non-selectivity, universality and objectivity.
4. The Subcommittee on Prevention and the States Parties shall cooperate in the implementation of the present Protocol.

Article 3

Each State Party shall set up, designate or maintain at the domestic level one or several visiting bodies for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (hereinafter referred to as the national preventive mechanism).

Article 4

1. Each State Party shall allow visits, in accordance with the present Protocol, by the mechanisms referred to in articles 2 and 3 to any place under its jurisdiction and control where persons are or may be deprived of their liberty, either by virtue of an order given by a public authority or at its instigation or with its consent or acquiescence (hereinafter referred to as places of detention). These visits shall be undertaken with a view to strengthening, if necessary, the protection of these persons against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
2. For the purposes of the present Protocol, deprivation of liberty means any form of detention or imprisonment or the placement of a person in a public or private custodial setting which that person is not permitted to leave at will by order of any judicial, administrative or other authority.

PART II

Subcommittee on Prevention

Article 5

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall consist of ten members. After the fiftieth ratification of or accession to the present Protocol, the number of the members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall increase to twenty-five.
2. The members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be chosen from among persons of high moral character, having proven professional experience in the field of the administration of justice, in particular criminal law, prison or police administration, or in the various fields relevant to the treatment of persons deprived of their liberty.
3. In the composition of the Subcommittee on Prevention due consideration shall be given to equitable geographic distribution and to the representation of different forms of civilization and legal systems of the States Parties.

4. In this composition consideration shall also be given to balanced gender representation on the basis of the principles of equality and non-discrimination.

5. No two members of the Subcommittee on Prevention may be nationals of the same State.

6. The members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall serve in their individual capacity, shall be independent and impartial and shall be available to serve the Subcommittee on Prevention efficiently.

Article 6

1. Each State Party may nominate, in accordance with paragraph 2 of the present article, up to two candidates possessing the qualifications and meeting the requirements set out in article 5, and in doing so shall provide detailed information on the qualifications of the nominees.

2.

(a) The nominees shall have the nationality of a State Party to the present Protocol;

(b) At least one of the two candidates shall have the nationality of the nominating State Party;

(c) No more than two nationals of a State Party shall be nominated;

(d) Before a State Party nominates a national of another State Party, it shall seek and obtain the consent of that State Party.

3. At least five months before the date of the meeting of the States Parties during which the elections will be held, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a letter to the States Parties inviting them to submit their nominations within three months. The Secretary-General shall submit a list, in alphabetical order, of all persons thus nominated, indicating the States Parties that have nominated them.

Article 7

1. The members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be elected in the following manner:

(a) Primary consideration shall be given to the fulfilment of the requirements and criteria of article 5 of the present Protocol;

(b) The initial election shall be held no later than six months after the entry into force of the present Protocol;

(c) The States Parties shall elect the members of the Subcommittee on Prevention by secret ballot;

(d) Elections of the members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be held at biennial meetings of the States Parties convened by the Secretary-General of the United Nations. At those meetings, for which two thirds of the States Parties shall constitute a quorum, the persons elected to the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be those who obtain the largest number of votes and an absolute majority of the votes of the representatives of the States Parties present and voting.

2. If during the election process two nationals of a State Party have become eligible to serve as members of the Subcommittee on Prevention, the candidate receiving the higher number of votes shall serve as the member of the Subcommittee on Prevention. Where nationals have received the same number of votes, the following procedure applies:

(a) Where only one has been nominated by the State Party of which he or she is a national, that national shall serve as the member of the Subcommittee on Prevention;

(b) Where both candidates have been nominated by the State Party of which they are nationals, a separate vote by secret ballot shall be held to determine which national shall become the member;

(c) Where neither candidate has been nominated by the State Party of which he or she is a national, a separate vote by secret ballot shall be held to determine which candidate shall be the member.

Article 8

If a member of the Subcommittee on Prevention dies or resigns, or for any cause can no longer perform his or her duties, the State Party that nominated the member shall nominate another eligible person possessing the qualifications and meeting the requirements set out in article 5, taking into account the need for a proper balance among the various fields of competence, to serve until the next meeting of the States Parties, subject to the approval of the majority of the States Parties. The approval shall be considered given unless half or more of the States Parties respond negatively within six weeks after having been informed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the proposed appointment.

Article 9

The members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be elected for a term of four years. They shall be eligible for re-election once if renominated. The term of half the members elected at the first election shall expire at the end of two years; immediately after the first election the names of those members shall be chosen by lot by the Chairman of the meeting referred to in article 7, paragraph 1 (d).

Article 10

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall elect its officers for a term of two years. They may be re-elected.

2. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall establish its own rules of procedure. These rules shall provide, inter alia, that:

(a) Half the members plus one shall constitute a quorum;

(b) Decisions of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be made by a majority vote of the members present;

(c) The Subcommittee on Prevention shall meet in camera.

3. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall convene the initial meeting of the Subcommittee on Prevention. After its initial meeting, the Subcommittee on Prevention shall meet at such times as shall be provided by its rules of procedure. The Subcommittee on Prevention and the Committee against Torture shall hold their sessions simultaneously at least once a year.

PART III

Mandate of the Subcommittee on Prevention

Article 11

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall:

(a) Visit the places referred to in article 4 and make recommendations to States Parties concerning the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(b) In regard to the national preventive mechanisms:

(i) Advise and assist States Parties, when necessary, in their establishment;

(ii) Maintain direct, and if necessary confidential, contact with the national preventive mechanisms and offer them training and technical assistance with a view to strengthening their capacities;

(iii) Advise and assist them in the evaluation of the needs and the means necessary to strengthen the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(iv) Make recommendations and observations to the States Parties with a view to strengthening the capacity and the mandate of the national preventive mechanisms for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(c) Cooperate, for the prevention of torture in general, with the relevant United Nations organs and mechanisms as well as with the international, regional and national institutions or organizations working towards the strengthening of the protection of all persons against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 12

In order to enable the Subcommittee on Prevention to comply with its mandate as laid down in article 11, the States Parties undertake:

(a) To receive the Subcommittee on Prevention in their territory and grant it access to the places of detention as defined in article 4 of the present Protocol;

(b) To provide all relevant information the Subcommittee on Prevention may request to evaluate the needs and measures that should be adopted to strengthen the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(c) To encourage and facilitate contacts between the Subcommittee on Prevention and the national preventive mechanisms;

(d) To examine the recommendations of the Subcommittee on Prevention and enter into dialogue with it on possible implementation measures.

Article 13

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall establish, at first by lot, a programme of regular visits to the States Parties in order to fulfil its mandate as established in article 11.

2. After consultations, the Subcommittee on Prevention shall notify the States Parties of its programme in order that they may, without delay, make the necessary practical arrangements for the visits to be conducted.

3. The visits shall be conducted by at least two members of the Subcommittee on Prevention. These members may be accompanied, if needed, by experts of demonstrated professional experience and knowledge in the fields covered by the present Protocol who shall be selected from a roster of experts prepared on the basis of proposals made by the States Parties, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations Centre for International Crime Prevention. In preparing the roster, the States Parties concerned shall propose no more than five national experts. The State Party concerned may oppose the inclusion of a specific expert in the visit, whereupon the Subcommittee on Prevention shall propose another expert.

4. If the Subcommittee on Prevention considers it appropriate, it may propose a short follow-up visit after a regular visit.

Article 14

1. In order to enable the Subcommittee on Prevention to fulfil its mandate, the States Parties to the present Protocol undertake to grant it:

(a) Unrestricted access to all information concerning the number of persons deprived of their liberty in places of detention as defined in article 4, as well as the number of places and their location;

(b) Unrestricted access to all information referring to the treatment of those persons as well as their conditions of detention;

(c) Subject to paragraph 2 below, unrestricted access to all places of detention and their installations and facilities;

(d) The opportunity to have private interviews with the persons deprived of their liberty without witnesses, either personally or with a translator if deemed necessary, as well as with any other person who the Subcommittee on Prevention believes may supply relevant information;

(e) The liberty to choose the places it wants to visit and the persons it wants to interview.

2. Objection to a visit to a particular place of detention may be made only on urgent and compelling grounds of national defence, public safety, natural disaster or serious disorder in the place to be visited that temporarily prevent the carrying out of such a visit. The existence of a declared state of emergency as such shall not be invoked by a State Party as a reason to object to a visit.

Article 15

No authority or official shall order, apply, permit or tolerate any sanction against any person or organization for having communicated to the Subcommittee on Prevention or to its delegates any information, whether true or false, and no such person or organization shall be otherwise prejudiced in any way.

Article 16

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall communicate its recommendations and observations confidentially to the State Party and, if relevant, to the national preventive mechanism.
2. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall publish its report, together with any comments of the State Party concerned, whenever requested to do so by that State Party. If the State Party makes part of the report public, the Subcommittee on Prevention may publish the report in whole or in part. However, no personal data shall be published without the express consent of the person concerned.
3. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall present a public annual report on its activities to the Committee against Torture.
4. If the State Party refuses to cooperate with the Subcommittee on Prevention according to articles 12 and 14, or to take steps to improve the situation in the light of the recommendations of the Subcommittee on Prevention, the Committee against Torture may, at the request of the Subcommittee on Prevention, decide, by a majority of its members, after the State Party has had an opportunity to make its views known, to make a public statement on the matter or to publish the report of the Subcommittee on Prevention.

PART IV

National preventive mechanisms

Article 17

Each State Party shall maintain, designate or establish, at the latest one year after the entry into force of the present Protocol or of its ratification or accession, one or several independent national preventive mechanisms for the prevention of torture at the domestic level. Mechanisms established by decentralized units may be designated as national preventive mechanisms for the purposes of the present Protocol if they are in conformity with its provisions.

Article 18

1. The States Parties shall guarantee the functional independence of the national preventive mechanisms as well as the independence of their personnel.
2. The States Parties shall take the necessary measures to ensure that the experts of the national preventive mechanism have the required capabilities and professional knowledge. They shall strive for a gender balance and the adequate representation of ethnic and minority groups in the country.
3. The States Parties undertake to make available the necessary resources for the functioning of the national preventive mechanisms.
4. When establishing national preventive mechanisms, States Parties shall give due consideration to the Principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights.

Article 19

The national preventive mechanisms shall be granted at a minimum the power:

- (a) To regularly examine the treatment of the persons deprived of their liberty in places of detention as defined in article 4, with a view to strengthening, if necessary, their protection against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;
- (b) To make recommendations to the relevant authorities with the aim of improving the treatment and the conditions of the persons deprived of their liberty and to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, taking into consideration the relevant norms of the United Nations;
- (c) To submit proposals and observations concerning existing or draft legislation.

Article 20

In order to enable the national preventive mechanisms to fulfil their mandate, the States Parties to the present Protocol undertake to grant them:

- (a) Access to all information concerning the number of persons deprived of their liberty in places of detention as defined in article 4, as well as the number of places and their location;
- (b) Access to all information referring to the treatment of those persons as well as their conditions of detention;
- (c) Access to all places of detention and their installations and facilities;
- (d) The opportunity to have private interviews with the persons deprived of their liberty without witnesses, either personally or with a translator if deemed necessary, as well as with any other person who the national preventive mechanism believes may supply relevant information;
- (e) The liberty to choose the places they want to visit and the persons they want to interview;
- (f) The right to have contacts with the Subcommittee on Prevention, to send it information and to meet with it.

Article 21

1. No authority or official shall order, apply, permit or tolerate any sanction against any person or organization for having communicated to the national preventive mechanism any information, whether true or false, and no such person or organization shall be otherwise prejudiced in any way.
2. Confidential information collected by the national preventive mechanism shall be privileged. No personal data shall be published without the express consent of the person concerned.

Article 22

The competent authorities of the State Party concerned shall examine the recommendations of the national preventive mechanism and enter into a dialogue with it on possible implementation measures.

Article 23

The States Parties to the present Protocol undertake to publish and disseminate the annual reports of the national preventive mechanisms.

PART V

Declaration

Article 24

1. Upon ratification, States Parties may make a declaration postponing the implementation of their obligations under either part III or part IV of the present Protocol.

2. This postponement shall be valid for a maximum of three years. After due representations made by the State Party and after consultation with the Subcommittee on Prevention, the Committee against Torture may extend that period for an additional two years.

PART VI

Financial provisions

Article 25

1. The expenditure incurred by the Subcommittee on Prevention in the implementation of the present Protocol shall be borne by the United Nations.

2. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall provide the necessary staff and facilities for the effective performance of the functions of the Subcommittee on Prevention under the present Protocol.

Article 26

1. A Special Fund shall be set up in accordance with the relevant procedures of the General Assembly, to be administered in accordance with the financial regulations and rules of the United Nations, to help finance the implementation of the recommendations made by the Subcommittee on Prevention after a visit to a State Party, as well as education programmes of the national preventive mechanisms.

2. The Special Fund may be financed through voluntary contributions made by Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and other private or public entities.

PART VII

Final provisions

Article 27

1. The present Protocol is open for signature by any State that has signed the Convention.

2. The present Protocol is subject to ratification by any State that has ratified or acceded to the Convention. Instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

3. The present Protocol shall be open to accession by any State that has ratified or acceded to the Convention.

4. Accession shall be effected by the deposit of an instrument of accession with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

5. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall inform all States that have signed the present Protocol or acceded to it of the deposit of each instrument of ratification or accession.

Article 28

1. The present Protocol shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the date of deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession.

2. For each State ratifying the present Protocol or acceding to it after the deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession, the present Protocol shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the date of deposit of its own instrument of ratification or accession.

Article 29

The provisions of the present Protocol shall extend to all parts of federal States without any limitations or exceptions.

Article 30

No reservations shall be made to the present Protocol.

Article 31

The provisions of the present Protocol shall not affect the obligations of States Parties under any regional convention instituting a system of visits to places of detention. The Subcommittee on Prevention and the bodies established under such regional conventions are encouraged to consult and cooperate with a view to avoiding duplication and promoting effectively the objectives of the present Protocol.

Article 32

The provisions of the present Protocol shall not affect the obligations of States Parties to the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto of 8 June 1977, nor the opportunity available to any State Party to authorize the International Committee of the Red Cross to visit places of detention in situations not covered by international humanitarian law.

Article 33

1. Any State Party may denounce the present Protocol at any time by written notification addressed to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall thereafter inform the other States Parties to the present Protocol and the Convention. Denunciation shall take effect one year after the date of receipt of the notification by the Secretary-General.

2. Such a denunciation shall not have the effect of releasing the State Party from its obligations under the present Protocol in regard to any act or situation that may occur prior to the date on which the denunciation becomes effective, or to the actions that the Subcommittee on Prevention has decided or may decide to take with respect to the State Party concerned, nor shall denunciation prejudice in any way the continued consideration of any matter already under consideration by the Subcommittee on Prevention prior to the date on which the denunciation becomes effective.

3. Following the date on which the denunciation of the State Party becomes effective, the Subcommittee on Prevention shall not commence consideration of any new matter regarding that State.

Article 34

1. Any State Party to the present Protocol may propose an amendment and file it with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The Secretary-General shall thereupon communicate the proposed amendment to the States Parties to the present Protocol with a request that they notify him whether they favour a conference of States Parties for the purpose of considering and voting upon the proposal. In the event that within four months from the date of such communication at least one third of the States Parties favour such a conference, the Secretary-General shall convene the conference under the auspices of the United Nations. Any amendment adopted by a majority of two thirds of the States Parties present and voting at the conference shall be submitted by the Secretary-General of the United Nations to all States Parties for acceptance.

2. An amendment adopted in accordance with paragraph 1 of the present article shall come into force when it has been accepted by a two-thirds majority of the States Parties to the present Protocol in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

3. When amendments come into force, they shall be binding on those States Parties that have accepted them, other States Parties still being bound by the provisions of the present Protocol and any earlier amendment that they have accepted.

Article 35

Members of the Subcommittee on Prevention and of the national preventive mechanisms shall be accorded such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions. Members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be accorded the privileges and immunities specified in section 22 of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations of 13 February 1946, subject to the provisions of section 23 of that Convention.

Article 36

When visiting a State Party, the members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall, without prejudice to the provisions and purposes of the present Protocol and such privileges and immunities as they may enjoy:

(a) Respect the laws and regulations of the visited State;

(b) Refrain from any action or activity incompatible with the impartial and international nature of their duties.

Article 37

1. The present Protocol, of which the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

2. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall transmit certified copies of the present Protocol to all States.

APPENDIX 2 – SAMPLE BASELINE STUDY TOOL REQUEST

OPCAT BASELINE STUDY TOOL (with reference to relevant OPCAT Articles)

The Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT) ratified by the Australian government on 21 December 2017, establishes a system of regular visits to all places of detention in order to prevent torture and ill-treatment, which includes cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Visits will be carried out at the international level by the United National Sub-Committee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (SPT).

Visits at the domestic level will be carried out by one or several National Preventive Mechanisms (NPMs) that are to be designated by the State and Territory governments. The Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman has been announced as the NPM Coordinator to facilitate the NPM Bodies. It has also been announced as the NPM Body for Commonwealth places of detention.

The Commonwealth Ombudsman as the NPM Coordinator is compiling a baseline report on the current status of detention inspection arrangements within Australia. This will inform governments and the public on the extent to which Australia’s existing arrangements are compliant with the OPCAT framework. We seek information about how existing bodies operate, including how and what facilities they inspect.

		Commonwealth Ombudsman	Australian Defence Force	Australian Human Rights Commission (incorporating the National Children’s Commissioner)
1	Date of creation	Legislation to establish the Office of the Commonwealth Ombudsman (the Office) was enabled in 1976. The first Commonwealth Ombudsman commenced operation on 1 July 1977. Inspection role commenced in May 2005.	18 October 2018	10 December 1986
	Inspection or oversight role	Inspection and oversight role.	Inspection role.	Inspection and oversight role.
OPCAT Framework
Independence — Articles 18(1), 18(3) and 18(4)
2	Legislative basis	Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)	Defence Force Discipline Act 1982 (Cth)	Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) (AHRC Act)
3	Autonomous resource allocation and expenditure	Yes, in accordance with the Financial Management Act 1994 (Cth) (FMA) and associated guidelines and directions.	Yes, in accordance with the FMA and associated departmental directions.	Yes. The Commission receives funds from parliament under s 44A. Section 44B requires those funds to be spent in the performance of Commission functions.
4	Personal and institutional independence from facilities inspected	As a statutory authority the Office is independent of those departments that operate Commonwealth places of detention.	The Officer in Charge (OIC) Defence Force Corrective Establishment (DFCE) is appointed by an instrument created under s 10 of the Defence Force Discipline Regulations 2018 (DFDR).	The Commission is an independent statutory body.
Composition — Article 18(2)
5	Gender ratio	Normally a 1:1 ratio. Will periodically be 2:1 depending on the location to be inspected and the composition of the detainee genders.	A ratio of 1:1 in terms of any inspections conducted by staff.	Teams include men and women, and occasionally women only (reflecting the higher proportion of women among staff).
6	Ethnic and minority representation	Minority groups are represented. However, ethnic diversity is not achieved.	Due to staff demographic, it is not possible to have ethnic and minority groups represented. Staff receive annual diversity and equity training to compensate.	Inspection teams routinely include diverse ethnic backgrounds (reflecting the diverse backgrounds among staff).
7	Expertise and professional knowledge	The team has more than 35 years’ experience in oversight, management and investigation of detention and detention-related matters, through both the Office and past employment history.	The team has completed a Detention Centre Supervisors Course which covers the governance and compliance aspects of detention in the ADF. They are also trained in current ADF detention procedures.	Inspection teams usually include the officer responsible for leading the refugees, asylum seekers and immigration detention policy section, investigation and conciliation officers, legal officers and officers experienced in handling immigration detention-related complaints.
8	Expertise and external supplementation	A panel of expert advisers is under development as part of the implementation of OPCAT.	The team comprises of Military Police senior staff who are subject matter experts in detention.	Inspection teams may include independent medical consultants (doctors, psychologists and other mental health professionals), whose services are provided on a pro bono basis.
Access to places — Article 4(1)
9	Legislative basis to inspect	Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)	Sections 10(3) and 18 of the DFDR.	Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth). The Commission has a wide range of functions under s 11(1) that provide a legislative basis for inspecting immigration detention facilities, as well as conducting examinations and inquiries into matters relating more generally to immigration detention policy and practices.

10	Places currently inspected	All immigration detention facilities, including but not limited to: Christmas Island, Perth, Yongah Hill, Adelaide, Maribyrnong, Melbourne, Villawood and Brisbane, and sundry interim facilities as periodically established.	Adult long-term ADF detention centres in Sydney, Townsville, Darwin, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth. Adult short-term facilities (for detention of less than seven days) in Ipswich, Albury-Wodonga, Wagga Wagga. Note: Corrective Services NSW is currently responsible for an annual technical inspection of the Defence Force Corrective Establishment.	All purpose-built immigration detention facilities in Australian territory. This currently includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Adelaide Immigration Transit Accommodation • Brisbane Immigration Transit Accommodation • Christmas Island Immigration Detention Centre • Maribyrnong Immigration Detention Centre • Melbourne Immigration Transit Accommodation • Perth Immigration Detention Centre • Villawood Immigration Detention Centre • Yongah Hill Immigration Detention Centre
11	Unannounced visits	The Ombudsman has the ability to conduct unannounced visits, but generally does not do so.	Yes	The Commission does not currently conduct unannounced visits. It organises visits through the Department of Home Affairs.
12	Frequency of visits	Each facility is visited twice per year.	Once per year.	There is no set schedule. In recent years they have been every 12–18 months.
13	Duration of visits	Up to a week.	Approximately four hours.	The duration of a visit depends on the size of facility and population; usually between two and four days.
Access to information — Articles 20(a) and 20(b)
14	Right to access all information (files, registers, medical records, dietary provisions and other data)	Yes. No restrictions are placed on our access to information that is relevant to a detainee.	Yes. No restrictions are placed on the inspecting team.	The Commission has not been able to access personal information (such as files and medical records) upon request during recent inspections, even when the person concerned has given written consent, unless production of the information was compelled under statute. The Commission regularly receives information (including files, medical records and other data) voluntarily when conducting an inquiry under the AHRC Act.
Access to persons — Articles 20(d) and 20(e)
15	Private interviews in location of choice	Yes. All formal interviews are conducted in the facilities’ interview rooms and all informal interviews are conducted in a location of the team’s choosing.	No restrictions.	Yes. Detention facility staff provide access to private interview rooms.
16	Choice of interviewee	Yes. We also interview detainees subject to s 486N Migration Act 1958 (Cth) reporting at the request of the internal assessment team.	No restrictions.	People in detention can request an interview with the team. All interviews are voluntary.
17	Ability to interview staff, detainees and other relevant persons	Yes. We do so as a regular part of the administrative and operational inspections currently undertaken.	No restrictions.	The Commission conducts an entry and an exit interview with senior staff at the facility. The Commission may also interview service providers at a facility. For example, interviewing medical staff to gather specific information about physical and mental health services.

The Ombudsman is currently consulted as stakeholders on NSW government legislation relevant to custodial facilities.	Yes, we are usually consulted or can publish reports in the public interest.	Yes.
Privileges, immunities and protections from reprisals — Articles 21 and 35
24	Protection from disclosure to government, judiciary, other organisations or persons	The Ombudsman does not have a specific inspection role but s 15 of the Act makes specific provisions for both protections and necessary disclosures. Additionally, there is a general prohibition on the disclosure of information obtained in connection with the administration of the Act unless that disclosure is made for certain prescribed purposes (s 34).	Section 15 provides that the Inspector must not disclose information in a report to Parliament if there is an overriding public interest against disclosure of the information.	Official Visitors adhere to a code of conduct that ensures privacy and confidentiality are core values.
25	Legislative basis for protection	Ombudsman Act 1974 (NSW) ss 6(5), 34 and 35A.	Inspector of Custodial Services Act 2012 , Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 and Ombudsman Act 1974 .	Section 189 Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW) and s 47 the Drug and Alcohol Treatment Act 2007 No 7 .
26	Protection from arrest, detention or seizure of personal baggage	Section 12(3) provides for confidential contact with the office by people who are detained by a public authority. Under s 37 of the Act, obstructing the Ombudsman or an officer of the Ombudsman in the exercise of their statutory powers is an offence.	Yes, s 22 provides protection from civil liability. Under s 19 it is an offence to obstruct the Inspector of Custodial Services or a member of staff in the exercise of their functions under the Act.	Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW) s 135 and the Drug and Alcohol Treatment Act 2007 No 7 s 33 provide protection from civil liability. While there is no offence of obstructing an official visitor, under s 132 of the MHA and s 30 of the DATA there are obligations on facility operators to facilitate the exercise of function by the official visitor.

OPCAT Framework		Training Centre Visitor (TCV)	Visiting Inspectors – Department for Correctional Services	Office of the Chief Psychiatrist	Community Visitor Scheme
12	Frequency of visits	A pilot Visiting Program and Review of Records concluded in October 2018 (report imminent). The Visiting Program for 2019 has commenced and will proceed through fortnightly visits to the two Adelaide Youth Training Centre campuses (Goldsborough and Jonal). A first formal inspection will occur in the last quarter of 2019.	South Australia has a group of more than 20 Visiting Inspectors who provide an independent regular inspection service to all South Australian prisons.	Frequency of visits is still being established across services. A program of both announced and unannounced visits is being established.	Required by legislation to visit at minimum every two months. Current strategy is to visit those sites that are more likely to have clients involuntary detained on a monthly basis.
13	Duration of visits	The 2019 visits mentioned above will be of three to six hours duration at each site. Separate attendances occur for other purposes, e.g. individual advocacy.	As required and necessary – approximately two hours on average.	The duration of a visit is dependent on the type of visit and scope of the inspection.	Visits can last between two and five hours, dependent on the size of the facility and the number of issues being presented.
Access to information — Article 20(a) and 20(b)
14	Right to access all information (files, registers, medical records, dietary provisions and other data)	The pilot Review of Records was undertaken and has been analysed for longer term planning purposes (report imminent). Reviews of Records will be undertaken quarterly from now on (and feed into the formal inspection process). Section 15 of the Youth Justice Administration Act 2016 (SA) provides the right to access all information necessary to perform its role.	Visiting Inspectors currently have the necessary independence and legislative mandate to visit prisons and prisoners and gather information. Medical records would be an exception as to access.	Yes, Mental Health Act 2009 (SA) ss 90 (4)(5)(6) and (7) apply. Section 90 (5) allows the Chief Psychiatrist to inspect the premises or any equipment or other things on the premises, to require any person to produce documents or records, or examine any document or records and take extracts from or make copies of any of them. A person cannot refuse or fail to comply with a requirement made under s 90(5) and there is a prohibition on hindering or obstructing the Chief Psychiatrist in the exercise of powers conferred under s 90(5).	Yes, s 57 relates.
Access to Persons — Article 20(d) and 20(e)
15	Private interviews in location of choice	Yes, although location will be restricted by detention conditions.	Visiting Inspectors speak directly with prisoners to ensure that they are treated fairly and that their accommodation is clean and safe. Visiting Inspectors may be called upon to investigate any complaints that could affect the health and welfare of prisoners.	The Chief Psychiatrist can undertake interviews of patients privately and a choice of location can be offered. It is likely to be a meeting or interview room at a mental health service.	Yes, each unit makes a room available for private interviews.
16	Choice of interviewee	Yes.	Yes. Legislatively enabled to enter and inspect any part of the correctional institution and speak to anyone in the facility for the purposes of, or in the course of, carrying out an inspection.	Yes.	Yes, restrictions would only be applied if the patient was assessed as too ill and therefore potentially a risk to the visitors.

17	Ability to interview staff, detainees and other relevant persons	Yes.	Yes.	Yes but only if the person consents to being interviewed. The Chief Psychiatrist cannot compel a person to be interviewed.	Yes, s 52 relates.
Reports and recommendations — Articles 19(b) and 19(c)
18	Ability to make post-visit reports	Yes.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes under s 50(4).
19	Report recipients	The TCV makes annual (and other) reports to Parliament through the Minister for Human Services as outlined in ss 18 and 19 of the Act. Other reports are prepared and released at the TCV's discretion. It should be noted that there is a guarantee of independence in the Act, including in s 12(2): "The Minister cannot control how the Visitor is to exercise the Visitor's statutory functions and powers and cannot give any direction with respect to the content of any report prepared by the Visitor."	The Minister. Visiting Inspectors make reports of their inspections to the general manager of the facility upon completion in a log. Reports are provided to the Minister.	A report can be made to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - The Chief Executive Officer of the Local Health Network/Board. - The Local Health Network/Board Mental Health and Quality and Safety Executive. - The Chief Executive of the Department for Health and Wellbeing. - The Minister for Health and Wellbeing. 	These reports are provided to the service managers or directors of the service with requests for a response to any issues raised in the reports.
20	Post-visit recommendations and measures for improvements	Post-visit recommendations are made, but there is no onus or guarantee that they will be implemented.	Yes.	Yes. Post visit recommendations are made and it is up to the Local Health Network/Board CEO and Mental Health Executive team to determine implementation. If further concerns are serious and ongoing, there can be escalation to the Department and the Minister.	Yes, the PCV meets with senior service managers (general and clinical) to both raise issues and offer any restorative solutions.
21	Any requirement for recipient of report to examine and engage with recommendations on possible implementation measures	The TCV reports to Parliament which has complete discretion with respect to its treatment of reports. While there is an implicit responsibility, there is no explicit statutory requirement that the range of possible TCV reports must be examined, engaged with or recommendations implemented.	No formal requirement in legislation, but general managers take recommendations by the Inspectors seriously and will provide a status update in the log of actions taken in response.	There is no formal requirement in legislation, but there is an expectation that the recipient body will provide a response on the report's recommendations and possible implementation measures.	Yes. The above mentioned meetings place pressure on the service manager to resolve issues and/or implement recommendations.
22	Publication of an annual report	Yes.	No.	Yes.	Yes.

23	Ability to make submissions, proposals and observations on relevant legislation	Generally speaking, yes. However since 2016, draft legislation has not always been made available to the TCV in a timely way (such as before it is introduced and passed in the Legislative Assembly) and there has not always been an invitation for formal submissions or responses.	Ability is not explicit but would not be prevented.	Yes, the Chief Psychiatrist has the ability to make submissions, proposals and observations on relevant legislation in their own right.	Yes. It would be normal for the PCV to be asked to comment on such policies.
Privileges, immunities and protections from reprisals — Articles 21 and 35
24	Protection from disclosure to government, judiciary, other organisations or persons	Section 20 guarantees confidentiality of information regarding individual cases disclosed and is not liable to disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act 1991 (SA) .	No.	If the information provided relates to an individual then there is significant protection under law. If it relates to an inspection it can be discoverable under the Freedom of Information Act 1991 (SA) .	Annual reports and special reports are protected by parliamentary privilege.
25	Legislative basis for protection	Youth Justice Administration Act 2016 (SA) s 20		Mental Health Act 2009 (SA) s 106	Have the same powers and functions as a Health Inspector under Health Care Act 2008 (SA) .
26	Protection from arrest, detention or seizure of personal baggage	Yes.	No.	Whilst no formal protections exist at law it is believed that there are also no powers that can be exercised except under the Criminal Law Consolidation Act 1935 (CLCA) and the Independent Commissioner against Corruption Act 2012 (ICAC) should there be reasonable suspicion that laws under either of those particular Acts have been breached.	Yes, in relation to conducting their role and assuming they have not committed a crime.
27	Protected from interference with communications	The TCV and staff must receive permission to bring laptops and other technology into the training centre. Mobile phones are not allowed in the centre and must be stored in lockers prior to entry. Regulation 5 of the Youth Justice Administration Regulations 2016 (SA) outlines that letters from residents to the TCV cannot be opened. There are various mechanisms for Adelaide Youth Training Centre residents to raise concerns, including dedicated unrecorded telephone lines to the Ombudsman (SA) and the TCV.	No.	No formal protections at law, however it is believed that there are no powers that can be exercised to interfere with communications unless there have been breaches of the CLCA or ICAC Acts (a criminal or corruption offence under those two Acts, respectively).	Yes, in relation to conducting their role and assuming they have not committed a crime.

28	Hold confidential information unable to be disclosed without the express consent of the providers of that information	Yes.	Confidentiality provisions in the Correctional Services Act 1982 protect and prevent disclosure of prisoner and offender information.	Yes, provisions under s 106 of the Mental Health Act 2009 (SA) prohibit disclosure of personal information relating to a person obtained in the course of administration of the Act.	Yes. Medical and legal information acquired through the scheme would remain confidential.
Ability to contact SPT – Article 26
29	Ability to have direct and confidential contact with the UN SPT	Yes.	Not prevented, except individuals' information under confidentiality provisions.	Statutory powers are quite specific and limited. Not legally vested with the ability, if required, to have direct and if necessary, confidential contact with the UN SPT.	Yes.
30	Contact include meetings, exchanges of information and/ or training sessions	Yes.	Not prevented.	There is nothing preventing meetings for general communication about the operation of OPCAT, for training and for exchanges of information but it may not be legally possible for there to be exchanges of specific information related to persons or to particular inspections undertaken under the authority provided by the Mental Health Act 2009 (SA) .	Yes.
Inspection methodology, standards and principles
31	Inspection methodology	Preparatory work has focused on planning for a pilot inspection in 2019. The intention is to reflect good practice in analogous jurisdictions, as well as incorporate learning from earlier stage activities.	Templates developed (and in use) guide and assist Inspectors through their visits and inspections.	An inspection standard has been prepared to guide inspections in mental health facilities.	A visit and inspection prompt sheet guides and assists Community Visitors through the process. The areas highlighted within this prompt are in line with the Australian Government's National standards for mental health services (2010) .

Bodies without inspectorate function
	SA Ombudsman	Independent Commissioner against corruption, Office for Public Integrity	Commissioner for Children and Young People	Guardian for Children and Young People	Office of the Public Advocate
1	Date of creation	1972			1993
	Inspection or oversight role	Advised it does not have an 'inspection' function, although does have a power to enter and inspect premises of an agency to which the Act applies for the purpose of the investigation of a complaint.	No inspection role as such, does not have the power to inspect police premises for any reason apart from an investigation.	The Commission advised it was created to advocate and promote for the rights and interests of all children and young people in South Australia who are under 18 years of age. It does not have the powers to inspect sites, advocate for individual children or monitor certain bodies.	The Guardian's responsibilities cross over with those of the Training Centre Visitor due to s 26(a) of the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) which requires that the Guardian promote "the best interests of children under the guardianship, or in the custody, of the Minister, and in particular those in alternative care." Alternative care specifically includes care provided in a detention facility. The implications of the overlapping responsibilities of the Guardian and Training Centre Visitor are still being explored.
OPCAT Framework
Independence — Articles 18(1), 18(3) and 18(4)
2	Legislative basis	Ombudsman Act 1972 (SA)			Guardianship and Administration Act 1993 (SA)
3	Autonomous resource allocation and expenditure	Autonomous resource expenditure (not budget allocation).			Yes, once budget allocated to the office by the Attorney-General's Department.
4	Personal and institutional independence from facilities inspected	In accordance with s 6 (1) of the Ombudsman Act 1972 (SA) , the Governor may, on a recommendation made by resolution of both Houses of Parliament, appoint a person to be the Ombudsman. Section 10 provides that the Ombudsman may be removed by the Governor upon the presentation of an address from both Houses of Parliament.			The Public Advocate is an independent statutory officer appointed by the Governor to fulfil statutory responsibilities. Section 21(2) of the Guardianship and Administration Act 1993 states that: 'in performing his or her functions the Public Advocate is not subject to the control or direction of the Minister'.
